PITTSBURGH TEAM PULLED A GRUNDY, ROGERS TELLS US

(Special To The News)
BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Jan. 3.—Result of the interdenominational football game, Cal. Methodists (modern) 47, Pittsburgh Presbyterian (old school) 14.

While $1,000 part time athletes howled in heathen glee, the Methodists believed in the "Passover" and their faith was well founded, for seven of the eight passes were touchdowns.

Right Rev. Russell Saunders was the principal presiding elder called upon to carry, or leave, their message and text into infidel territory. As darkness enveloped the field Pittsburgh did better. The Presbyterians seemed to be carrying out the traditions of their late senator, Uncle Joe Grundy. They were always "lobbying" when they should have been running.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

PA NEW OBSERVES

New Castle residents should feel a certain measure of pride in the small fire loss sustained here last year, the per capita average being around $1.60. No serious fires occurred in the city in 1929. Fire Chief Lynn states, the total loss in 1929 being but $85,000.

Local World War Veterans, who failed to avail themselves of the last minute opportunity yesterday, to apply for their adjusted service certificates are now out of luck unless Congress takes pity on them and reopens the matter during the coming session. The time limit for filing expired at 11:59 last evening.

The Consistory dinner club is having a renowned African hunter, William Harwood, as its guest tonight. Mr. Harwood is noted for his lectures on wild animals, and he is an authority on these. His adventures in the wilds of the jungles are said to have been most thrilling.

This break in the cold weather has lessened demands placed upon New Castle's charitable organizations and the county poor department. A saving of coal is made possible by present weather conditions.

Thursday evening seemed to be a good night to get distance on the radio. Florida, Louisiana and Kentucky came in quite strong.

On a large sign on East Washington street is a sign advertising America. It reads "Forward America—Nothing can Stop U. S."

There are still some of the survivors of the out of door Christmas decorations standing about the city, but they are being taken down as fast as possible.

Not for many years have such extreme weather conditions been experienced as during the past month or so. From below zero to almost midsummer temperatures are but the matter of a day or two.

Saw a license number today which certainly looked small. It was number 86AD.

There was a considerable drop in the temperature noted this morning. The maximum yesterday was 52, while (Continued On Page Two)

Three Bodies Recovered;
Hollywood Grief-Stricken
By Tragedy; Ten Drowned

(International News Service)
VENICE, Cal., Jan. 3.—Search for the seven missing bodies that sank with the two airplanes off Point Vincent following the fatal film accident was to be resumed today at daybreak.

Equipped with high-powered searchlights, rescuers in two speed boats vainly sought to recover the bodies of the men until after midnight, when they left the spot where the planes sank.

Of the ten employees of the Fox Film Co., who lost their lives when the planes collided during the taking of some aerial scenes over the ocean, the bodies of three had been recovered: Max Gold, Ben Frankel and Conrad Wells.

Navy speed boats had chained off the spot off Point Vincent where the planes sank and were standing by until the searching crews returned at daybreak.

Saratoga

(International News Service)
LONG BEACH, Cal., Jan. 3.—Two men were dead today and four others injured, two seriously, as the result of an explosion which destroyed the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Saratoga.

Damage to the Saratoga! was not thought to be great.

Henry Kenfield, 24, Hampton, Conn., was seriously burned.

Albert L. Houston, 20, Centralia, Wash., also suffered serious burns.

Two seamen who suffered less serious burns were George W. Peber, 19, Annapolis, Md., and J. Norron.

The bodies of Va. Vielle and Lalor had not been recovered late yesterday.

Pigeons Fly Out Of Court House Desks

Employees Of County Commissioners Office Are Trying To Unravel Mystery

How could two pigeons get into the drawers of two desks in the county commissioners' office? That is the mystery which employees of the office are endeavoring to unravel. When the Misses Ardy Ryhal and Eleanor Dewberry, clerks in the office, opened drawers of their desks yesterday morning the two pigeons flew out. The young ladies were naturally very much startled and quickly called the county commissioners and Clerk William Eakin.

In the meantime the pigeons were circling about the high ceiling of the room in their effort to escape.

Liner Passengers Thought Tragedy But Movie Stunt

(International News Service)
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 3.—To the passengers on the liner Ruth Alexander it was "just a movie stunt"—that airplane crash that hurled ten men to their deaths.

As the steamer plowed towards the harbor here, those on deck casually watched the three planes less than a mile away.

They saw two of them meet in an embrace of death and then flutter into the sea, leaving a trail of smoke and flame. It looked as though one or two specks tumbled from the fuselages, passengers said.

Small boats came hurrying from shoreward towards the burning wreckage.

"Just a movie stunt, but mighty interesting to see," passengers agreed.

Several of them, not particularly impressed, mentioned the "movie stunt" to ship news reporters when the liner docked last night.

Brutal Killing

(International News Service)
BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—Reuben Heyman, 22, was shot and killed late last night and his girl escort, Mrs. Dorothy Burgess, 24, was criminally attacked by a negro who charged them with a pistol as they sat in their parked automobile in deserted Druid Hall Park.

Mrs. Burgess, estranged from her husband who, she said, is living in Washington, D. C., was in a serious condition at Union Memorial hospital today.

She said her assailant told her he was a World War veteran and pulled up the leg of his trousers to reveal to her a cork leg.

"My name is Lorenzo Price, I'm going to die soon anyway and I don't care about what I've done," Mrs. Burgess said he told her.

"Then he swallowed some poison tablets, got violently sick and ran into the darkness," she told police.

Police believe the murderer was the same who accosted Mrs. Margaret Wilhelm, 60, a widow, yesterday afternoon in Duncan Woods in the northeast section. He attacked her, cut her throat, left her lying bleeding in the lonely woods.

Hails Motorist
The second crime was learned when Mrs. Burgess cried to a passing motorist.

"I've been attacked by a negro. He killed Reuben! Call for help," she gasped and fainted.

Police found Heyman's body lying in a ditch a few yards from his parked automobile. Two bullets had been fired into his chest, one piercing his lung and caused death, physicians said.

Mrs. Burgess regained consciousness later and said Heyman had been her friend for quite some time. Her story continued.

"Last night we went riding and stopped to talk in the park. It was raining and no other machines were about.

Charges With Pistol
"Then the negro ran from the darkness and jumped on the running board. He had a pistol and commanded Heyman to drive to the Cotman estate several miles north of the park.

"There he told him to get out of the car. The negro followed him a few steps and fired three shots and Heyman fell into the ditch. Then the man returned to the machine and attacked me."

Police found the third shot merely pierced Heyman's coat.

Court Sessions For Coming Two Months

Two terms of common pleas court are scheduled for January and one for February. Sessions will open on the second Monday of January, the third Monday and the second Monday of February. Cases on the common pleas trial list will be taken up. During the year which has just closed Judge Hildebrand and Chambers have done remarkably good work in keeping the common pleas trial list cleaned up.

Machine Found In Garage At Wheeling Island Last Night

Donald Schroeder, four year old son of Irene Schroeder, alleged to be the trigger woman and one of a trio wanted for the murder of Highway Patrol Corporal Brady C. Paul, a week ago in New Castle.

Butler road, today identified the photograph of W. Glenn Dague, according to Captain Mauk, Troop D, State Police, Butler, Pa.

Dague, a former automobile sales cover salesman is said to be the sweetheart of the alleged gunwoman and Donald, her son, refers to him as "Daddy." He is alleged to have been with the Schroeder woman and Tom Crawford, brother to Irene when the holdup occurred at Butler, and the battle occurred in Butler road.

The photograph was shown to "Donnie" as he is called today and when Captain Mauk was asked at one o'clock if a photograph had been identified he replied that "the son has identified a photograph of Dague."

"That's 'Daddy' Dague," Donnie Schroeder identified the picture of W. Glenn Dague this morning but was not certain of the identity of the picture of a woman shown him.

"That's my mama, ain't it?" he said when shown an etching of a woman.

Of Dague he was certain. "That's Daddy Dague," he said when this was shown him.

Ray Horton, owner of the stolen Chrysler, when shown the picture of Dague, said: "there is some resemblance, especially around the mouth, but the man I saw did not wear glasses, nor did he seem nearly so refined as the man in the photograph."

Miss Elsie Nickum, East Side girl who was being taken home by Horton in the Chrysler when it was stolen, was uncertain, and said: "I could not say definitely that it is the same man, but on the other hand I would not say it was not he."

Car Not Returned Yet
The Chrysler automobile which the killers stole here was found yesterday in a private garage on Wheeling Island. The company which carried insurance on the car will return the machine here, it is believed. The Chrysler roadster had not been returned by noon today.

Captain Mauk was asked if "a man and woman, friends of the Schroeder woman, Dague and Crawford," had been taken into custody.

"If they have been arrested I do not know about it," Mauk replied. The captain of troop D said that there have been no new developments since the finding of the automobile.

Hidden away in an obscure garage on Wheeling Island, W. Va., the Chrysler automobile which was stolen from R. C. Horton on Adams street by the killers of Brady Paul, was found. Late Thursday afternoon Officer Albert Megale of the Wheeling police force noticed a garage with the blinds drawn. Curious to know what was inside he got in and there found the Chrysler for which the police of three states have been hunting.

While the finding of the Chrysler does not aid materially in the arrest of the killing, it does "prove beyond any reasonable doubt that the police have the right track, and are looking for the right people," according to Captain Jacob Mauk, head of the state police barracks at Butler, Pa.

Find Garage Owner.
Mrs. W. E. Ueber, owner of the garage, told the Wheeling police that she had rented the garage to a man and a woman and her description of the pair tallies with the description of Irene Schroeder and Glenn Dague.

Mrs. Ueber said that she had rented the garage about two months ago but did not know what cars were being (Continued On Page Ten)

(BULLETIN)
(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—A man and a girl who may know something about where Irene Schroeder, blonde gunwoman, and her two companions, disappeared, following the slaying of Corporal Brady Paul near New Castle last Friday, were arrested here today and taken to Greensburg Barracks of the State Police for further questioning.

Effort To Charter Plane
State police have developed the theory that the gun woman and her companions have been in and out of Pittsburgh as late as last Tuesday. Suspicion was aroused when it was learned that a man who refused to identify himself and his woman companion, had tried to charter an airplane to take them to Cleveland or New York. Failure to identify themselves resulted in refusal of the plane.

The couple placed under arrest today came from Akron, O. Last Friday, police said. They have been rooming here in Forbes street in a house under the surveillance of the police. The woman is said to have "slipped" under questioning by police and admitted that she knew Irene Schroeder whom police want for the slaying of the State Highway patrolman.

Grandfather's New Story
The motor car in which the woman and her two companions, whom police believe to be Glen Dague and her brother, Tom Crawford, made their escape from New Castle after the slaying, was recovered late yesterday.

SMALL SUMS OF MONEY TAKEN

Two churches of the city were the scene of robberies in the past 24 hours, the police report.

Meantime, this morning, the person who would steal from the church and from the poor, evidently had a hand in the robbery perpetrated at the Arlington Avenue Free Methodist church on Thursday, and reported to the police today.

Detective Logan and Officer Lynch made the investigation this morning and found that entrance had been effected by forcing a rear window of the church.

Five dollars in money was taken from the poor box located in the vestibule at the front of the church, while about a dollar belonging to another fund was found and taken.

Slight Accidents Reported To Police

Raymond Gerston of 116 Willard avenue, reported Thursday that he was enroute south on Highland avenue, at Sheridan avenue, when his machine was in a collision with a car driven by a woman and bearing Pennsylvania license 39-219. Some damage was done to both cars.

William Chrissis of 1319 Pennsylvania avenue, reported Thursday that he was enroute north on Mill street, when his machine was in a collision with a car bearing Pennsylvania license 4428A and driven by a woman also going north on Mill street, ran into and damaged his machine.

The limbs are bare that were verdant green, and the stalks are ugly and brown, and the floor is covered with needle piles, that the youngsters have shaken down. The lights still flash but the tree is bare and it has to go out today, its a relic now for the garbage can, for the dogs in the alley to play. The tinsel is off and the trinkets too, and today it will get the gate, that Christmas tree that we loved so well, the weather is thirty-eight.

Council Will Discuss Light Contract Today

Will Meet Officials Of Penn.-Ohio Company Relative To New Pact This Afternoon

ENGINEER WILL REPORT SITUATION

City officials and representatives have afternoon will confer with Louis Round, Pennsylvania-Ohio Power system relative to a contract for electric light for five years, dating from January 1.

H. Whitford Jones, electrical engineer of Cleveland, employed by the city inspected the local light situation last night.

Today Round appeared before city council which met in the city building and asked the solons when the contract would be put through.

He gave as his understanding that his company had accepted a proposition of the city.

Councilman Tyler said that no definite arrangement had been made as the discussions had been informal.

Councilman Reeves took the opposite position.

Under the informal arrangement the company was to furnish additional candlepower for the amount of money spent for light during 1929.

Finally Councilman Tyler said he does not leave office until the new members are sworn in, which is also true of Councilman Davies.

Tyler and Davies maintained Councilmen-elect Louis Genkinger and Stanley Treser should attend the session.

The conference was later designed in a motion presented by Tyler which was passed by colleagues.

P. R. R. Banquet Plans Progress

Ninth Annual Celebration Of Transportation Forces To Be Gala Event

Preliminary activity in connection with the ninth annual banquet of the Pennsylvania Railroad Employees' Transportation Department Banquet association is under way at local headquarters of the company which sends a large delegation to the banquet each year.

This year's gala event has been set for February 8 in the William Pen hotel at Pittsburgh. Arrangements for the evening will be just as elaborate as heretofore.

Reports are that committees which are making the plans are functioning already.

Mostil Is Sold To Toledo Team

(International News Service) CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Johnny Mostil, veteran center fielder of the Chicago White Sox, has been released outright to the Toledo club of the American association, Harry Grabiner, secretary of the White Sox announced today. The release on option by Danny Dugan, young southpaw pitcher, to Toledo, was also announced by Grabiner.

Sharon Man Is Reserve Officer

(Special To The News) WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The name of John Frank Williams, Jr., of Sharon, has been added to the national list of United States army reserve officers, the department of war announces.

Williams, whose home is at 130 Fourth street, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry reserves, the war department states.

Alabaman, 110, Recalls Seeing Jackson Shot

One Of "Stonewall's" Men, Born Year Before State Entered Union

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 3.—Lonnie Boutwell, aged 110, who lives near Dublin, Ala., is challenging all the neighboring communities to bring out their centenarians and let him tell them a thing or two that happened before they were born.

Mr. Boutwell was born in August, 1818, a year before Alabama was admitted into the Union as a State. He can tell of events which took place over 100 years ago, and is an interesting conversationalist. He was born in South Carolina, but his parents moved to Alabama when he was an infant, driving all the way in an ox wagon. He lives with his son, Isaac Boutwell.

Mr. Boutwell is the father of eight children, six still alive. Those living are Mrs. V. S. Rowell, seventy-three, of Greenville, Ala., W. B. Boutwell, sixty-nine of Seima, Ala., Isaac Boutwell, sixty-seven, of Dublin, Ala., Henry Boutwell, sixty of Farmersville, Ala., Mrs. Clarissa Johnson, fifty-five of Prichett, Tex., and Mrs. P. H. Philpot, eighty, of Gladwater, Tex.

Mr. Boutwell farmed until the Civil War when he enlisted in Company M, 6th Alabama Regiment, and served under Gen. Stonewall Jackson.

He recalls seeing Jackson, when the General was shot by one of his own men, throw up his hands with his cap in it and say, "Boy, you wounded me badly." During his service in the war he received a wound in the thigh from which he never fully recovered.

After the war, Mr. Boutwell returned to Alabama and resumed farming. His wife died five years ago.

STAR LORE A PREHISTORIC PEOPLE MADE BRILLIANT DISCOVERY

By Arthur DeV. Carpenter.

It is startling what prehistoric peoples discovered about nature's phenomena! The Chaldeans noted that eclipses on sun and moon recur in a regular order over a period of 18 years 11 1/3 days (10 1/3 days if there are five leap years). This period contains 6883.32 days. They called the period a Saros. The total number of eclipses during the period is about 70, of which 41 are solar and 29 lunar. After that another like period begins all over again in the same relative order, only the next solar eclipse is always 120 degrees farther west, which makes it eight hours later in time.

Half Million Is Involved In Big Oil Company Deal

Superior Oil Corporation Of Kentucky Passes To Petroleum Exploration Firm

(International News Service) SISTERVILLE, W. Va., Jan. 3.—The consummation of a deal involving more than a half million dollars and by which holdings of the Superior Oil corporation in Kentucky passed under the control of the Petroleum Exploration company of Sisterville, was made known today.

The property figuring the deal included all developed and undeveloped leaseholds and personal property of Superior, netting more than 500 barrels daily production in the field.

There are approximately 13,000 acres of the developed leasehold.

The Superior Oil corporation had been operating in Kentucky for several years when it was decided some three years ago to move the main office from Lexington, Ky., to Tulsa, Okla., the sale was made to the local concern when Superior decided to concentrate on its Midcontinent properties.

Petroleum Exploration company was organized here in 1916 by E. A. Durham, who is president of the concern. The main office is in Sisterville with a branch office in Lexington, Ky.

The deal by which Petroleum took over the properties of Superior had been under deliberation for a long period of time. With its consummation, Superior properties in Lee, Powell, Estill, Wolfe and Wayne counties, Kentucky came under the control of the local company January 1.

Following the World War Mr. Lee came to Ellwood City and because of his previous football experience was asked to coach the Ellwood City High School team, which he did in 1919, 1920, 1921, 1924, 1925, 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929.

Under his tutelage many college stars got their start. Horse Johnson who played with Harry Wilson at State and later at Pitt, Pony Johnson, Nick Shuler, Tom McMurdo, Jim McMurdo, Applebaum, and a host of other football stars got their high school instruction under Peck Lee and his work as a line coach in particular has attracted the attention of college coaches in this section of the country.

He is married and resides at 220 4th Street, Ellwood City. While he has not been appointed yet, his name will be presented to the Lawrence County court on January 6th when District Attorney John S. Powers takes the oath and it is understood that his appointment will be approving.

equipment swung into position yesterday toward sundown.

Flying 3,000 feet above the ocean and about three miles off shore, their wing tips interlocked and the two big planes staggered and swung together in a confused mass, then plunged into the sea in flames.

Three Bodies Found.

Onlookers saw three of the passengers hurled clear of the mass, their bodies were recovered. The other seven were carried beneath the surface by the tons of wreckage.

Today a crew of divers and a fleet of small boats were to comb the waters in an attempt to locate the wreckage and recover the victims' bodies.

The death list: Kenneth Hawks, director and husband of Mary Astor.

Captain Ralph Cook, pilot.

Lieut. Hallock Rouse, army reserve flier.

George Eastman, cameraman.

Tom Harris, property man.

Hank Johannes, property man.

Doors Taken Off.

Doors had been taken off the planes before they left Clover Field in order that the cameramen would have unobstructed vision of the stunt they were to photograph. This, it is believed, will aid in liberating the bodies.

The two planes, together with a third ship, had just jockeyed into position, facing into the setting sun. According to plans they were to separate at 4,000 feet to allow the third plane, piloted by Col. Roscoe Turner, to come in between. Rouse and Cook were piloting.

Turner's plane carried Jacob Triebwasser, Fred White and Fred Osborne. Triebwasser's parachute leap was to be photographed by cameramen in the two ships, but the leap was never made.

They were preparing to shoot the last scene of a film sequence for the Fox Film Corporation entitled "Such Men Are Dangerous."

The story was based on the mysterious death of Alfred Loewenstein, Belgian multi-millionaire, who disappeared from a transport plane above the English Channel July 5, 1928. Warner Baxter is starred in the film.

Blinded By Sun.

Witnesses declare that one or both of the pilots had perhaps been blinded by the glare of the setting sun when the two planes wavered. One banked slightly to the right and the other swerved upward and banked to the left; then they met in a sickening crash and, locked together, plunged into the sea.

Turner's plane at that time was 1,000 feet away from the other two and at a lower altitude.

THE AUTOMOBILE INDICE

WITH Christmas over and with the longest day of the year again at our backs the thoughts of the nation again turn to new automobile models and to automobile shows where they will make their debut.

The 1930 mode will impress the show visitor with the greater beauty of body design and the comfort and attractiveness of interiors. The artist has had his opportunity and made the most of it.

There seems to be nothing else to design for the convenience of drivers. Their work has been lightened until it becomes a pleasure to control a car from speed to speed and to steer it through traffic. Engines are more powerful and quieter. Such smoothness of running was undreamed of a few years ago. Brakes instantly respond. There are more roominess and better seating. Some of the accessories are marvels of utility.

Modern pleasure cars have become homes on wheels, and a woman driving has an easier task than ever. There has been a great gain in appearance and prices have been adjusted to every income. Automobiles that perform and look well are within the reach of all. The aristocrats of cars were never handsomer.

These are anxious days for the automobile industry. They are the barometer of its activities in 1930. Before January passes the dealers and manufacturers will have a pretty fair idea of what is before them. The public joins with them in hoping for a fat year because national prosperity largely depends upon prosperity in the automobile industry.

CHEERFUL OUTLOOK FOR NEW YEAR

There is a pretty general feeling of confidence regarding the business outlook for the new year which is reflected in the opinions expressed by men in widely diversified industries.

The stock market crash in the last part of 1929 was a far from pleasant experience to many, but it has had a sobering effect without causing any lack of faith in the possibilities of this wonderful country. Everywhere says the Philadelphia Inquirer is seen evidence of the determination not to permit that incident to weaken the spirit of optimism which has always been one of the characteristics of the American people, and as a result even the most conservative are saying that we should have at least a fairly good year.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon says it is always hazardous to indulge in prophecy, but he has no hesitation in saying that he cannot see anything in the present situation that is either menacing or that warrants pessimism. During the winter months there may be some slackness or unemployment, but hardly more than at this season each year. "I have every confidence," says Mr. Mellon, "that there will be a revival of activity during the spring, and that during the coming year the country will make steady progress." He calls attention to the fact that in the credit situation the trend of money is down, and he adds: "There is plenty of credit available, and we have reason to expect that the rates for new capital in building construction and expansion will be such as to facilitate the promotion and accomplishment of new undertakings."

Coming from such a source these words are very cheering, and coupled with the statements from the executives of railroad, public utility and industrial concerns during the president's recent conferences they should be the means of inspiring business men everywhere. The head of the treasury makes one other statement that has much significance. He says: "The government's finances are in a sound condition which warrants the cut in taxes, and the government itself is in a position to do its part in helping the country to forge ahead."

Secretary of Commerce Lamont says that it is impossible to forecast what temporary ups and downs may occur, "but the nature of the economic disposition of the United States is such that one may confidently predict, for the long run, a continuance of prosperity and progress."

The department of agriculture also gives out a most cheerful report which indicates that the farmer is in a better position than he was a year ago. There is every reason, therefore, for facing the future in a resolute and confident spirit. There will be problems to be met from time to time, but with everybody resolved to pull together the results should be satisfactory.

BECOMES FINE ART

The old-fashioned husking bee moves up in the scale of things with the announcement a prize of $1000 has been offered for next year's national champion.

The suggestion was made by the secretary of agriculture and carried out by the Oklahoma oil man. Other citizens who may retain memories of corn-husking days, with a knowledge of the skill, fortitude, and deft movements necessary to make a champion, have the opportunity to donate the second and third prizes. Then we shall see corn-husking become a fine art, or sporting event in the big money class.

It is time, no doubt, the boys who crack the corn against the bang-board are given a larger recognition. They are experts in an old cause which returns values as they work and heretofore they have labored for that uncertain reward which comes with the finding of a red ear.

Bo-Broadway

BY JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

By Central Press
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Some months ago a little band of earnest citizens visited the city hall with the idea of asking Jimmy if he wouldn't please make them happy by permitting his name to be used as a candidate for re-election for mayor. Sir James listened to their impassioned pleas and smiling at them in that bright, boyish fashion of his, replied:

"Who could say no?"

Well, as you know, he ran for re-election and he literally swept back into office. New York is fond of The Lad from St. Luke's, and nothing he can ever do will dispel that affection. New York's idea is that in one in whom there is so much to admire there's really nothing to forgive.

One of the first things he did after being re-elected was to raise his own salary from $25,000 to $40,000. A wild protest arose in some quarters—a protest that not in the least ruffled The Debonnaire One's philosophic calm. He faced the taxpayers with the same disarming smile he had flashed on the nominating committee some months before, and looking into his smiling Irish eyes they read there a reiteration of his famous line:

"Who can say no?"

And that's what's known as "That."

DID YOU GET ANY LIKE THESE?

Christmas cards are losing their tender sentiment. The scepticism of a sceptical age is manifesting itself nowhere in more marked degree than in Yuletide greetings. The New York vogue in this direction aims at "cleverness."

Probably the best card on Broadway in the past season, bore the name of Herbert Fields—Lew's son. It read:

"Fifty Million Christians Can't Be Wrong—Merry Christmas."

George Peck, Sage of Gramercy, to whom the New York Telephone Company pays money for scintillating ideas in publicity, sent out the following from the Sten Island chateau that shelters him, his wife and two kids:

"Bushels of greetings from the Four Pecks."

While from Florida, land of alligators, booms, boomlets, Ford Edson, Firestone, oranges, sunshine and mem-o-ries, Kent Watson, expatriate New York paper man, sent to his friends on Broadway, a black-bordered announcement bewailing the "death of Santa Claus."

Kent isn't as hard boiled as he'd like you to believe. He walks around with a cynical smile and a long, black cigar protruding from the port side of his mouth. But the Pastor will wager a plugged dime against a brace of muscovy ducks that Kent hung up his stockings on Christmas Eve.

THE SHUBERTS

The Shuberts, theatrical moguls, crave to be referred to in print as "Lee and J. J. Shubert."

They heartily dislike to be called, "Leendjake," and Lee sees red whenever a newspaper refers to his brother as "Jake." He thinks "J. J." has more dignity. "J. J." may have more dignity but who in these glorious days gives a tinker's dam about dignity?

Dignity was the outstanding achievement of the old wooden Indian. And look what's happened to the wooden Indian.

The other day some careless newspaper scribe called "J. J." "Jake" in a story. A letter of reproof emanated from the Leendjake offices and back went the following reply from the irrelevant scribe:

"Take a tip from an Old Timer and don't kick on 'Jake.' There'll be plenty time to hand in a remonstrance when we start to call him 'Jake.'"

FOR THE FAMILY

According to the American Library Association, report the two books most in demand in hundreds of libraries throughout the country, for the month of December, were: "A Preface to Morals" and "The Tragic Era."

Walter Lippman, author of the former is editor of The New York Morning World. Claude Bowers, who wrote "The Tragic Era," is an editor on the Evening World.

The boys evidently believe in keeping it in the family.

THE WAYWARD ONES

I have pity for the man who can never understand

That crops are gathered only by the men who till the land.

For dreams of luck and fortune are empty things and vain.

The house which shelters laughter has been built out of pain.

For empty is our wishing and vain our sweet desires

The price of all man gathers is sweating at the fires.

The price men pay for gardens where June-time blossoms blow

And yet there dwells the dreamer who vision's lovely things

And longs to own the mind's content which only labor brings.

He shivers in the wintry blast and hungry goes to bed.

Because he cannot walk the path which all the toilers tread.

Oh, men there are despite them, and pass the beggars by.

They think of them as lazy men, but seldom question why.

Perhaps they were ill-fated, for the labor of the land

And what to many is so plain, they cannot understand.

Better White House Offices Are Urged As Result Of Fire

Growing Business Of Executive Department And Need Of Safe Place For Records Receive Attention Of Public

Flames in the White House offices commonly known as the "West Wing" have turned public attention to the need of better quarters for the business of the executive department, and also to the long-desired building of a structure for the safe housing of valuable government documents.

"At present," says the WASHINGTON EVENING STAR, "there are no facilities in Washington, within the scope of the government's own provisions, for the entertainment of foreign visitors or the assembly of large groups for the discussion of national and international affairs. An executive office building, designed upon properly liberal lines, would supply that deficiency. It would provide the White House of its disfiguring excrecence. This matter might as well be considered now in all its aspects. The government is in the midst of a construction program, designed to provide adequately for its needs." The Star incidentally mentions the plan to provide executive offices within a new state department building, "possibly replacing the present tri-departmental building immediately west of the White House."

"The unfortunate state, war and navy building, of neither good architectural lines nor of convenient arrangement," is mentioned also by the ROANOKE WORLD-NEWS, with the statement: "The navy has already moved out. The war department is preparing to do so. The way will be offered in time for the complete reconstruction or rebuilding of this structure along architectural lines more in keeping with the surroundings, and with a vast improvement in convenience of arrangement. It could then readily give ample and fitting space to the offices of the president and his growing staff, and to the state department, with which the president must necessarily keep in close touch. The day when the president of the United States can do his work in a study at home, or in a little outbuilding in the yard is over."

"The White House," states the BOSTON TRANSCRIPT, "is no Quirinal; it is simply, as has often been said, an American gentleman's residence." Its extensions must be of humble height. But at least they can be permanently and beautifully built and not, as were those which have just been destroyed, of timber and thin brick walls.

"The volume of business carried on in the executive offices building," according to the SCRANTON TIMES, "has grown tremendously in recent years so that regardless of the damage by fire, a new structure would have been inevitable in a short while. When one is built the public will want it to be not only a fitting place for the nation's chief executive to carry on the affairs of his office but fireproof and worthy in every way of a country such as ours and a city of such splendid structures as Washington."

Commenting on the report that Mr. Hoover will make temporary use of a portion of the mansion, the ST. LOUIS POST-DEMOCRAT says: "The Lincoln, given the administration of Lincoln, the PROVIDENCE JOURNAL remarks: 'May the return of the president's office to the second floor, with its wider view across the White House park, and its further view of the Washington Monument, and the saturation of it all with memories of Lincoln, give a still keener vision and a still broader scope to the mind of the new president as he applies himself to the vastly greater if not more pressing problems of the second quarter of the 20th century.'"

"The history of fires is that the buildings are usually replaced by something better, more serviceable and more attractive. That may well be the comfortable reflection in this case, as well as that President Hoover can now begin at home with his national building program," says the DAVENPORT DEMOCRAT, while the BUFFALO EVENING NEWS, the NEW YORK EVENING POST and the NEWARK EVENING NEWS, remarking upon the fortunate escape of valuable papers from the destruction of the fire, advocate measures in the direction of erecting a suitable archives building for the government.

"The most spectacular fire at the White House since British troops burned the mansion when Washington was captured in 1814," is a subject for comment by the ROCK ISLAND ARGUS, which feels that "the people of the country have cause for rejoicing that the residential section of the famous home of the presidents was untouched by the flames." The ST. PAUL PIONEER PRESS feels that "it does seem a pity that the first serious fire in the White house since 1812 should have chosen Christmas eve of all times to occur."

"Being relatively modern," according to the HARRISBURG PATRIOT, "the executive offices have not attached to them the sentiment of the White House itself. That structure is so historic that even fire in its neighborhood is likely to give the nation a fright." The BROOKLYN DAILY EAGLE, however, while recognizing these facts, remarks as to the offices: "Five presidents have worked there. Much of the history of the United States' participation in the war and of the subsequent course of the nation was created within its walls. The building itself has been rather an adornment of the White House grounds than a detractor to their charms. In avoiding further risk from fire the architects will have also to avoid the risk of replacing the office building with a structure less suitable to its place."

"After all important papers had been removed, and while the president and his family stood in the beautiful old White House itself, watching in safety the fire in the wing," suggests the GRAND RAPIDS PRESS "it is probable that Mr. Hoover was not greatly concerned about it all. No doubt he was already planning how to rebuild a make-shift and unsatisfactory structure into a real business office, fireproof and on up-to-date lines."

The KANSAS CITY JOURNAL-POST offers the verdict: "If we were building a mansion for the president and an executive office now, unfettered by traditions, the office would probably occupy a few floors of a modern skyscraper and the residence would be in some other part of town. Presidents might last longer if they kept regular business hours and could not be reached at other times."

Business attracts more Princeton graduates than any other line, new figures reveal. The pupil drops from third place to seventh. The legal profession is second.

Why do fewer young men today wish to become preachers than was the case with their fathers and grandfathers? Has the church changed, has Christianity changed, have young men changed, have teachers and teaching changed? What is the answer?

Population has increased and life has grown more crowded, complex, intense? There is a great need today for what the church is supposed to offer than there was thirty years ago. Why is there apparently a decreasing number of men who are intent upon making religion and the affairs of the church a life work?

USING THE BEST MEANS.

The Episcopal church in New York has adopted the motion picture as a radio to further its educational interests. The church has many activities and the program is being extended by the most modern methods. All of which is simply making use of the best means for the best purposes. This is as it should be—so long as these agencies (the motion picture and the radio) do not take the place of the church. They are not meant to supplant the church or its fundamental program. No more entertainment is to do that. They can never be regarded as anything but means to an end.

MORE THAN A JOB.

There are several things more important than a routine job. Jury duty is one of them. A railroad trainmaster was fined $25 and sentenced to 60 days in jail for discharging a switchman who was away from work twelve days while on jury duty. Said the judge: "You are guilty of an offense against patriotism, a serious charge, not so much from a legal standpoint as from that of Americanism. If such action was general it might tend to demoralize our judicial system. You are now in contempt of court and I pass sentence to make an example of you."

EDUCATION AT ITS BEST.

More than a million school children, in assemblies in hundreds of New York public schools, have "accepted" the Kellogg peace treaties. Pupils pledge themselves to do all in their power to further the significance of the treaties which propose to keep the peace of the world.

This is the way, and perhaps the only way, to bring about international peace and maintain it. Put the idea of peace and its importance into the consciousness of children. Teach the glories of peace instead of the so-called glories of war.

Inter-County Y Meet Saturday

Competing Teams In Readiness For Athletic Program At Butler

BOYS, MEN WILL SHARE IN EVENTS

Final practice sessions for the inter-county athletic games between the New Castle and Butler, Y. M. C. A. were run off this afternoon and enthusiasm in the competition increased hourly as the time for the meet drew nearer.

The contest with the different athletic teams of the Butler association has become an annual affair.

"The boys hope to win in everything, of course," Henry T. MacNicholas, acting physical director, who will accompany the party, said. "Butler will produce some stiff competition no doubt, but we'll have some equally as good to counter it."

A special bus will be provided for the occasion, will haul the boys while private automobiles will convey the men later in the day. Boys' events commenced at 2 o'clock and continue through the afternoon. The men's volleyball game, the only event in which they will participate, is scheduled to start at 7:30.

The New Castle bus will depart promptly at 12 noon for the Butler county seat, and soon after arrival activity will commence. The first basketball game occurs at 2 o'clock.

Teams whose members are under 14 years of age will engage in the first series; those whose players are under 16 years play next with those under 18 years scheduled last. During the time games are being played, action in the swimming pool will be at its height. There Jack Herberdt will be in general charge. Assisting him will be Joe Bara, senior leaders' corpsman, and James Herbold, assistant coach.

Boys are entered, according to the program, in the 40-yard free style swim, 100-yard free style swim, 40-yard breast stroke swim, the relay, diving and plunge for distance. The local Y's relay team is one of the fastest in the district, having copped the district trophy in the aquatic meet of last year.

Layman Joe Sulzer and Lew Harlan will head the party of men who will play volleyball, leaving the city around 6:15. Their match is set for 7:30. About 13 men will make the trip.

Besides floor and pool competition there will be contests among the boys in games such as checkers, pool, chess, ping pong and cue rouge. Participants in these were announced by Boys' Work Secretary W. A. Thomas this morning, and follow:

Boys under 14—Checkers, Joe Howley and Walter Duff; ping pong, William Trick and Walter Duff; and cue rouge, William Trick and Dave Gattall.

Boys under 18—Checkers, John Uram and Joe Hnat; pool, Joe Hnat and Clifford Pollock; chess, Charles Perelman and William Nunn; ping pong, Joe Hnat and William Stoughton; and cue rouge, John Uram and John Brincko.

Reunited Ladies League

Fifteen members of the Reunited Ladies League met at the home of Mrs. George Carbaugh, Atlantic avenue, Thursday evening. Handkerchief showers were given Mrs. Fronie Davis and Mrs. Skidmore. During the business session, Mrs. Clark was appointed assistant secretary.

Following the social hour refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Henderson, Mrs. Jno. Carbaugh, Miss Nina Strong, Miss Martha Davis and Miss Phyllis Patterson.

In two weeks, Mrs. George Wyman, Maryland avenue will be hostess.

Class Party

Members of the Mrs. H. C. Weaver's Sunday School class of the First M. E. church met at the home of Miss Mary Jane Woods, Hazel avenue, on Thursday evening for a class party.

Presenters were changed and the evening proved to be an enjoyable one. Later in the evening dance refreshments were served by the hostess. During the business meeting, new officers were elected for the coming year.

Examining The Mind Is Stylish

By GARRY C. MYERS, PH. D.
America was here before Columbus found it. You have an I. Q. whether it is found or not. An intelligence test is a means by which your approximate I. Q. is uncovered. Of course no one is able to measure the intelligence of any person as precisely as ribbon or miles can be measured, which is to say that your absolute I. Q. no one will ever find.

You know that an intelligence test is a series of mental stunts which had been given a large number of persons. Any individual regardless of his chronological age, doing on these stunts as well as the average person did who had been living for six years, is said to have a mental age of six years. Any person doing as well as the average person did who had been living eleven years is said to have a mental age of eleven years.

Now suppose your child, Cid, according to his birth record in your Bible, has lived on this terrestrial sphere seven years, and an intelligence test rates him with a mental age of nine years, you have a bright boy. Assuming the rating to be about accurate, he is mentally two years above his age.

But about his I. Q.? I. Q. means intelligence quotient. Here is the way the psychologist does it. He divides the mental age by the chronological age (how long the child has lived) is always the divisor; the quotient is called the intelligence quotient, I. Q. Cid's chronological age is 7 years; mental age, 9 years. 9 divided by 7 equals 1.29. For convenience psychologists drop the point and call it 129. Cid has an I. Q. of 129. Now if Cid's mental age were 7 years his I. Q. would be 100. The psychologist considers from 90-100 as normal, or average.

But suppose Cid had a mental age of only four years. Then his I. Q. would be 4 divided by 7 or 57. His I. Q. then would be 57. In that event he would be very dull and would be expected by the psychologist to learn little or nothing from books.

Cid at seven with an I. Q. of 129 is likely to have an I. Q. of about 129 at sixteen. If at seven he had an I. Q. of only 57 his I. Q. at sixteen would be about the same. Of course there are exceptions, but as a rule the I. Q. is about constant for all ages of the same individual. Bright at four usually means bright at sixteen; dull at six, dull at sixteen.

Peter's Adventures

THE SONG OF HATE

What a to-do those birds did make. What, no cats? The birds waited the strange question from treetop to treetop. Suddenly the air was filled with bird chuckles. The feathered folk were much pleased about something. Peter could stand it no longer. "What are you so gleeful about," demanded he. "And what were you so afraid of, a moment ago? Cats? How silly. Suppose one did creep this way, what harm could he do you? You're up in the air and could take to your wings before any cat could pounce upon you."

Eeep! Don't mention it," twittered the birds. "It is bad enough to see Puss-cat paddy-pawing upon us in our dreams and wake up in the middle of the night with a nightmare without talking about such unpleasant things in the broad daylight. Cats are our deadliest enemies, you know, boy, and in self-protection we birds have to be sure neither friend nor foe has one trailing his footsteps."

"Oh, come now, cats aren't such wicked creatures as you'd make them; read word for his old friend, Blackie. 'I know a good cat.'"

"There are no such animals!" interrupted one of the birds, and the feathered folks chirped in chorus: "All cats are bad cats. They scratch and spit at each other. They don't fight fair but sneak upon their enemies from ambush. And they are thieves as well as murderers, in the bargain. They stalk and kill us and rob our nests in the tree tops. Cats; we hate cats."

Peter saw it was no use to argue. "All right, have it your own way," said he. "This is too beautiful a day to fuss about anything. Besides, if I were you, I suppose I'd feel just as you do. Do you know, Biffer, Cuddie? He is dining with the Sexton Beedies, but I expect him out of the restaurant any minute."

"Restaurant? What restaurant?" chorused the birds.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

There's one thing certain, you can't cry a man into loving you. Most women have learned that in the past few years, but one of them writes me that she has wept her heart out over a misbehavin' husband, and she can't do a thing with him. He doesn't even seem disturbed when she weeps. He sits and reads his paper or walks out. He's "cruel and heartless and adamant, not to say merciless."

The flawless method is to say: "Gosh all fish hooks darling, these biscuits are a good deal like Indian rubber. Don't try to eat them and ruin your works." That girl either will learn to make GOOD biscuits or she will have a cheerful companion to take her out and buy her meals. Your trouble may not be biscuits, but that method is flawless.

There are more happy women in the world than ever before, and if you are a simpering cry baby, your man is sure to meet up with one of them. You're welcome. Don't worry, just STOP CRYING.

MERCER NEWS

In the year 1929 the marriages of Mercer county greatly exceeded the divorces, according to the recent counting of the divorces. There were but 96 divorces granted during the year, 64 of these being women and 32 men.

Lawyer W. G. Barker, who was appointed by Judge J. A. McLaughlin to audit the books in the court house, commenced his work on December 31.

The first office to be audited was that of Daisy T. Morse.

Suit was filed here by R. B. Beatty of Canton, O., against the Eagle Moving & Storage company of Wilkinsburg, Pa., to recover $500. Beatty, owner of a Chevy coupe, 1929 model, damaged his car on the Mercer-Jackson Center road November 28, at 11 o'clock at night. He claims that the truck of the Eagle Moving Co. was parked on a curve without proper lighting and extended in one place past the middle of the road. To avoid hitting the truck Beatty was forced to run into the ditch. The cost of the car repair was $143.50 and the value of the car was greatly lessened so he is asking for a settlement of $500.

Things were very quiet in Mercer county for New Year's, with no arrests made by the state police for liquor. Several dances New Year's evening were visited by the state police, but everything was in good order and no complaints were made.

Congress Reconvening Next Week May Settle Prohibition Flare-Up

Washington Being Rocked By Worst Prohibition Storm
In Past Ten Years

Senator Borah On Warpath Against Both Enforcement And Prosecuting Personnel

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The prohibition storm that is rocking Washington as it has not been rocked in the whole 10 years of Volsteadism showed no signs of abating today.

On the contrary, it appeared to be gathering force and intensity for a grand blow-off next week when Congress reassembles to provide the proper setting. It promises to be acutely embarrassing to the administration. It is, in fact, already so.

Several Developments

The developments were these:

1. Senator Borah, the administration's severest critic, refused flatly to submit any of his "evidence" to Attorney General Mitchell concerning the inefficiency of nearly a score of district attorneys, which Borah contends is sufficient to merit their instant dismissal.
2. Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, the flaming evangelist of prohibition during the campaign, is understood to have joined forces with Borah to the extent of furnishing him with much of the "evidence" which he has. She is reported to have taken it with her when she retired from the Department of Justice a few months ago.
3. The dries are badly split among themselves as to biggest leakage in the present enforcement set-up. Borah contending that it is industrial alcohol diversion, which he characterized as "a national disgrace," a contention Dr. J. M. Doran, the prohibition commissioner, hotly denied. Alcohol diversion, Doran contended, is now a negligible factor.
4. Senator Jones, author of the five-and-ten law, took to the air last night with a radio speech to the country, defending prohibition and appealing for public support at this critical time.
5. Senator Fess (R) of Ohio announced he will propose Senator Borah for chairmanship of the new joint congressional committee which is to consider methods of tightening the prohibitory laws. This is regarded as a move to silence the Idahoan by putting the responsibility upon his shoulders. Borah's friends will be surprised if he accepts the post, for, while he has always been a dry, he has scrupulously refrained from putting the Borah label on any specific legislation. He prefers the role of critic.

Borah on Warpath

Borah, who was President Hoover's chief prohibition orator during the last campaign, is definitely on the warpath against both the enforcement and prosecuting personnel of the present regime. He has carried his case direct to the White House, but thus far President Hoover has elected to keep hands off.

The President has in his possession the preliminary report of the law enforcement commission, which Senator Jones said he was "glad to announce" did not express any opinion concerning the wisdom or unwisdom of the 18th amendment. The President also has a long report from Borah, elaborating upon his charges that the Department of Justice is inefficient and the prohibition bureau itself "a national disgrace." It is this report that is understood to contain the ammunition which Mrs. Willebrandt, now in private law practice, supplied the Idahoan.

Departments In Turmoil

The Department of Justice and the Prohibition Bureau are both in turmoil over the Borah charges, and the knowledge that as soon as Congress gets back to provide the proper stage, they are going to come in for even more caustic criticism.

Defending his own administration, Attorney General Mitchell declared he had cleaned house to the extent of causing an even dozen district attorneys to leave the government payroll. And he issued a blank invitation to Borah to submit any evidence he had of the inefficiency of others.

To this challenge Borah made a flat and somewhat contemptuous refusal. He said he had no idea of seeing Mr. Mitchell, and further he asserted that if the department did not know which district attorneys were enforcing the law and which were not then it only showed the incompetence of the departmental heads.

Similarly, Senator Borah declared that if treasury officials including Mr. Doran, were not aware that diversion of industrial alcohol was the chief leakage in the prohibition system it merely went to show "their ignorance and incompetence."

Constant Conflict

Mrs. Willebrandt is in charge of the justice end of prohibition enforcement during her years as assistant attorney general. She was in more or less constant conflict with her superior, and with those in the treasury with whom she was supposed to collaborate. She had hoped to become the first woman attorney general in history, and when the post went elsewhere she retired, disappointed and disillusioned. She took with her a lot of what is described as "inside story" concerning district attorneys with whom she had clashed, and concerning alcohol diversions, which she has long contended was prohibition's greatest wear spot. Evidently this information has now been planted where it will grow and flourish.

Report Commission Split

On top of these current about the "capital today" that the law enforcement commission itself is badly split on the prohibition question, notwithstanding Senator Jones' statement that he was "glad to announce" the commission would express no opinion as to the wisdom or unwisdom of the eighteenth amendment.

It was significantly noted, that Senator Jones' announcement did not include the Volstead law, and there is a vast amount of speculation as to whether the commission is going to express an opinion on prohibition's enabling act.

It is fairly well known that several members of the law enforcement commission privately consider the Volstead law, as is, is unenforceable. Whether they will insist upon saying so is another question.

Dries Are Worried

For days prior to Jones' announcement, the radical dries were actually worried for fear the commission was going to step out and crack down on prohibition generally. It was this fear that sent Senator Jones hot-foot to the commission several times. After a number of visits he emerged with the statement that he was "glad to announce" the commission was not going to deal with the 18th amendment. The Volstead law itself, however, is another matter.

Meanwhile, Senator Shepard's bill to make the purchaser of liquor equally guilty of a felony with the seller probably will be pigeon-holed for the time being. The dries are split among themselves on it.

Senator Jones, who at first favored it, has not taken the position that the supreme court should first decide whether the buyer cannot be prosecuted under the present law. Jones thinks he can be and in this he was joined today by Borah.

"I feel," said Borah, "that the present law is broad enough to get both sellers and purchasers, but if it isn't, and it can be shown that additional legislation is necessary I will support it."

Innocent People Are Stopped By Officer

Result Of Report By An Unduly Alarmed Motorist On Lincoln Highway

Some evidence of the thoroughness with which every possible clue or report received by the state police authorities in regard to the killers of Corporal Brady Paul of the State Highway Patrol is shown in the rapid manner in which three innocent motorists were stopped by a Pittsburgh officer Thursday afternoon.

A report furnished by an unduly alarmed motorist to the state police was broadcasted about 2:35 p. m. Thursday over the Telephone Printer system of the state police. It was to the effect that the blond killer and her two companions had been seen on the Lincoln highway near East McKeesport headed toward Pittsburgh.

Patrolman William Bruce of Pittsburgh, heard this report at roll call and went on duty ten minutes later at Point Bridge. The car and occupants answering the description broadcast appeared about the time he went on duty and he stopped them and took them into central police station. The members of the party were enroute from Ohio to Beaver Falls to attend the funeral of a relative.

Bethel A. M. E. Special Service

At the services being held in Bethel A. M. E. church, last night Rev. C. D. Henderson gave an interesting sermon on the grave necessity of giving our best and first things to God. Mrs. Ina Nelson rendered a lovely gospel solo.

This evening the sermon subject will be "Make Them Say It," and a prayer service will be conducted, beginning at 7:30 p. m.

Christmas Trees Being Taken Down

Among Interesting Scenes Under Trees Was That Made By Edward Millison

Now is the season of dismantling Christmas trees. The bulbs of most of the trees in town have been removed in the last day or so and the trees have been carried to the cellar and dumped into the furnace.

Some time on tree decorations and made some remarkable village and farm scenes beneath the trees.

One miniature village scene which was especially noteworthy was that made by Edward E. Millison, of Arlington avenue.

Mr. Millison's display was different from some of the others, the scenes in that it was a view of an army camp, an airdrome, a village and surrounding farms. A large part of the display was whittled by Mr. Millison, out of wood.

Everything was on a platform about 8 feet long and half as wide. There was a lake with a railroad and train surrounding it and a bridge over one end of the lake. Mechanical boats moved back and forth on the water—it all looked quite realistic.

In the village there was a butcher shop, grocery, church, and a bank. It was even equipped with telephone service.

On the farms were cows, sheep and chickens. A large farmhouse with furniture in it was another feature in the display.

Boy Scout News

TROOP 15 SESSION.

Scoutmaster Sidney Smith and his assistants, Glen Montgomery and Dick Sheats were in charge of the New Year's Eve meeting of the First Christian Troop No. 15.

The evening was spent in a combination business meeting and party. Senior Patrol leader Ralph Montgomery led the opening ceremonies, scout oath and pledge of allegiance. Dues were then taken and good turns given.

Three new boys: Ralph McCormick, Clair Shaffer and Alfred Hill were admitted into membership.

Many games were played including scout baseball and ring-toss. Scoutmaster Smith showed interesting moving pictures of Niagara Falls, Brady's Bend and Cascade Park.

Refreshments were served by the scoutmaster and junior assistant scoutmaster Oscar Patton and senior patrol leader Montgomery. To be bigger and better this year than ever before was voted as the New Year's resolutions.

After the whistles blew in the new year the troop was dismissed by taps, sung by the troop.

At the next meeting of the troop the Indian tepee will be formally dedicated.

Scribe, Herbert Rodgers.

Two Small Fires Cause Of Alarms

Local firemen answered two alarms during the last 24 hours, neither of which were productive of any damage.

At 10:05 last evening they were called to the home of Verde Hoover of 8 Craig street, by an alarm from Box 14. Smoke burning out in the chimney caused uneasiness among neighbors and the alarm was sounded. No damage resulted.

Second ward firemen were called to Edgewood avenue by an alarm from Box 29 at 8:40 this morning. E. H. Ebeling of that street was attempting to start his car, when gasoline about the motor flashed. Mr. Ebeling called firemen, and then went back and threw water on the blaze extinguishing it. He then drove out and down Highland avenue, where he met the firemen and reported to them that the fire had been extinguished.

Love Has Narrow Escape When Car Hits Church Wall

R. C. Love of this city, had a narrow escape from serious injury when his car overturned on the New Castle-New Bedford road, while he was returning from Youngstown on New Year's night. Love had passed almost through the village of New Bedford and was rounding the curve just east of the city when he skidded from the roadway and ran into the wall in front of the Presbyterian church. About six feet of the wall, which is about one foot thick was knocked down. Love's car was overturned and badly damaged, but fortunately he escaped serious injury, although considerably shaken up.

Hoover's Quarters

Stewart Says President Will Have Temporary Offices For Rest Of Term

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Staff Writer
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3. — President Hoover will transact business in temporary quarters during all the rest of his term if he serves only one four-year period.

Nothing can be surer than that. And idea that the government can make up its pious mind how to shelter the chief executive permanently, in place of his burned-out accommodations in the west wing of the White House—and actually get it done short of early March, 1933—

Any such extravagant notion might as well be dismissed right now as too fantastic to be seriously considered.

Mr. Hoover quite likely knows already what kind of offices the president ought to have and where they ought to be situated.

He may, too, have influence enough to have his plan adopted.

Getting it adopted and seeing it realized in substantial building material are two altogether different propositions, however.

In fact, Mr. Hoover may serve out his initial four years, and another four years, and two or three of his successors' terms may have passed in history before a suitable permanent presidential office structure is dedicated in Washington.

And, by that time, the then president's staff will entirely have outgrown the space and facilities provided for it.

Mr. Hoover's present temporary offices rooms will have to do him for quite awhile.

When one applies the term "temporary" to anything governmental in Washington, one means temporary for any length of time up to a dozen years or so; that goes almost without saying.

And of course the White House west wing will be licked into some sort of habitable shape again in fairly short order. It will not be permitted to stand there indefinitely—a melancholy rack of rums. It would look too terrible, right on the grounds with the main structure of the executive mansion.

But even after the west wing has been repaired, the job will be only temporary.

The truth is, the west wing executive offices never were much more than temporary. They were built for President Roosevelt, and probably they served him pretty satisfactorily—temporarily. Presidential business was not so heavy in his day. It was not so heavy in President Coolidge's day—as witness the fact that Mr. Coolidge managed very well with one private secretary, while Mr. Hoover has three of them.

No; the west wing offices have been inadequate for Mr. Hoover from the day he moved into the White House. His staff already had overflowed into the basement and was beginning to ascend into the attic.

Nobody suggests that he set the wing on fire to get rid of it—but it was a convenient fire nevertheless.

That is, it was momentarily inconvenient, but will not be in the long run.

The handy thing about the west wing offices was that the president was able to reach them without leaving his home roof.

The State and War building, into which the presidential desk was moved "temporarily," is only the width of a narrow street and up a long flight of steps farther away, but the street is not roofed and cannot very well be.

At that, it is not a bad place for the president, as to location, if the rest of the war department offices were moved out of it and down to Potomac park, whither seven-eighths of them were transferred into a "temporary" building when America entered the world conflict.

President Hoover has spoken deprecatingly of the looks of the State and War building, however. He may not want to stay in it any longer than he has to.

There is no denying that the edifice is old-fashioned. It was built during the mansard era. Still, it has historic association—not that anyone cares for them in this generation.

Maybe the most popular suggestion is for a presidential building in the block at the west end of Lafayette square—which is to say, catty-cornered across this little park from the White House. It would involve a trip also across Pennsylvania avenue and Jackson place, but the walk would take a scant two minutes and the police could stop traffic while the president was negotiating it. They would need to, too. An auto almost ran over President Coolidge once, at Pennsylvania and Jackson.

But this is looking a long distance into the future. Some successor to President Hoover may have a fire-proof office building all to himself one of these days, but it is extremely improbable that Mr. Hoover will.

It is correct to wear novelty gloves with cuffs or other trimmings and slip-ons in kidskin or lambskin (glace or suede) in cream, off-white shades, sun-tan, beige, black and white and two-tone combinations for afternoon.

Dead Live Only In Memory Of Friends Is Theme Of New Play

By DAVID O. SENTNER
International News Service Dramatic Editor.

Copyright, 1929, International News Service NEW YORK, Jan. 3. — Synthetic immortality is suggested in "Thunder in the Air" the play which in its London run drew thousands of parents and relatives who had lost loved ones in the Great War.

Dipping into what lies behind the wings of life, Robins Millar, the playwright, submits the thesis that the dead live on only in the memory of those who have known them.

A British soldier is revealed ten years after his death, in the trenches as returning to his family.

To each of his relatives, friends and acquaintances he appears as they remember him.

His father sees him as a scapegrace.

His mother sees him as the little boy who used to blow his toy trumpet in the garden.

His sweetheart sees him as the lad with whom she played in the orchard.

The minister's wife sees him as her lover for a week.

The minister sees him hatedly as the man who took his wife.

The butler sees him as the one who stole his life's savings.

I saw Ronnie Vexted, the returned-from-the-dead soldier, as the ghost of an idea fleshed in khaki and paraded rather woodenly across the minds of the audience.

There is no place for wood in the composition of a phantom and that is the weakness of the production. Ronnie is too physical and too glowing an apparition.

And the banal dialogue which strings the idea through three acts is too unfortunately reminiscent of this life and its conversational tedium and too little suggestive of the gossamer world from which Ronnie dropped in.

The nuances of feeling and stage craft present a similar theme of Barrie's "Mary Rose" is absent by its inconspicuousness.

The conflict in the production is heightened by James Harding, the man whom Ronnie saved on the battlefield, attempting to win Pamela, fiancée of the dead soldier, from the memory of her lover.

Despite its dramatic rheumatism, the play appeared to fascinate the audience, showing perhaps that an idea is stronger than its weakest interpretation.

140-Year-Old Virginia House To Be Rebuilt

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 3.—Colross, historically famous old residence here, built by Jonathan Swift in 1790, has just been purchased by John R. Munn, of New York city, who plans to have it torn down and reconstructed in Princeton, N. J.

Swift built the house, originally named Belle Aire, while he was consul to Morocco and it was there that his daughter was married to General Robideau, of France. George Washington frequently referred to Swift in his memoirs.

Later Belle Aire became the property of the prominent Mason family and more recently it was owned by the Smoots, one of whom is now mayor of Alexandria.

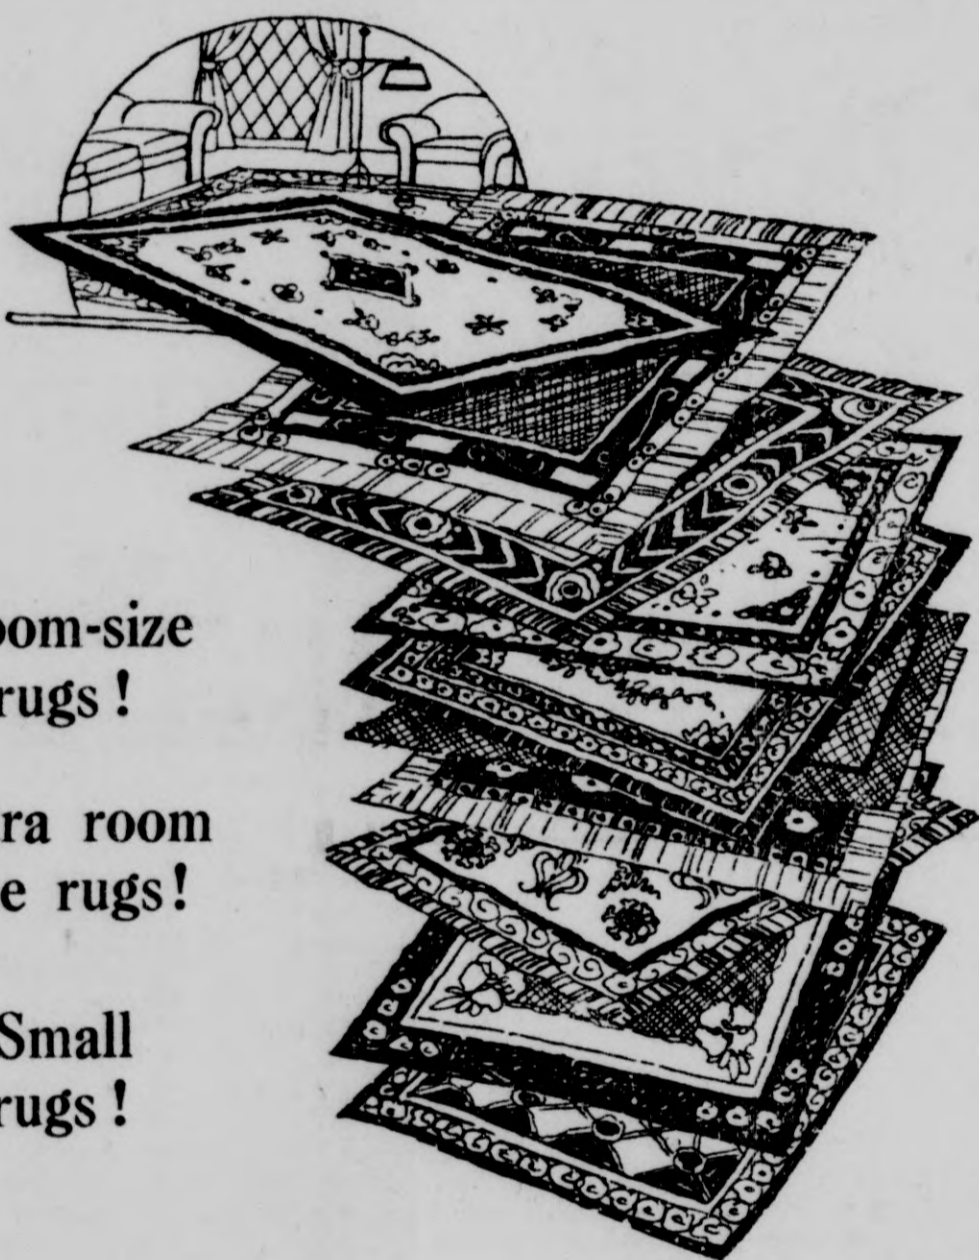

Colross lately has been battered by wind storms, and has deteriorated to such an extent that several patriotic societies have called attention to it.

America is fast acquiring culture but it still takes some skin-kicking to encourage use of the butter knife.

Army Guarding Million Feet Of History Films

Pictures Taken By Signal Corps Stored In Fire-Proof Vault

TECHNICAL FILMS AMONG COLLECTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Army Signal Corps, as custodian of pictorial films, both still and movie for the army, is storing approximately 1,200,000 feet of valuable historical film. It was disclosed in the annual report of Maj. Gen. George S. Gibbs, chief signal officer.

Gibbs said the films are in a vault affording excellent protection against fire, but that it had reached its capacity and further facilities are necessary. He said a project underway the past year of revising existing training films is receiving considerable attention from the signal corps and the interested branches of the service.

Cavalry Films
To date, he said, two films have been completed for the cavalry, two are in process of completion for the infantry, and one will be completed in the near future for the medical corps.

"Through the cooperation of the bureau of mines of the Department of Commerce," he said, "this office obtained certain very appropriate and useful technical films with permission to use them for instruction purposes in the army."

Gibbs described the work the signal corps is doing in the field of radio and called attention to the Fort Monmouth citizens military training camp where signal-reserve officers are being trained.

News of Disaster

"The first news of the disaster in Florida, September 19, 1928," he said, "was obtained from an amateur radio station in the army met at West Palm Beach, Florida."

"This message was picked up by the Army radio station at Washington and transmitted to National Headquarters of the Red Cross. Communication was maintained by these stations until other communication could be established. It is believed that the establishment and maintenance of an amateur radio net completely covering the country is of very great importance and under certain conditions might afford the only means of communication."

Long Distance Call Saves Lives Of Family

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 3.—A long distance telephone call from this city to San Antonio, Texas, saved Major L. LeRoy Muller and members of his family from possible death in the Texas city.

Bowman Elder living at 1229 North Delaware Street here, placed a long distance telephone call for the Major who formerly lived in Indianapolis.

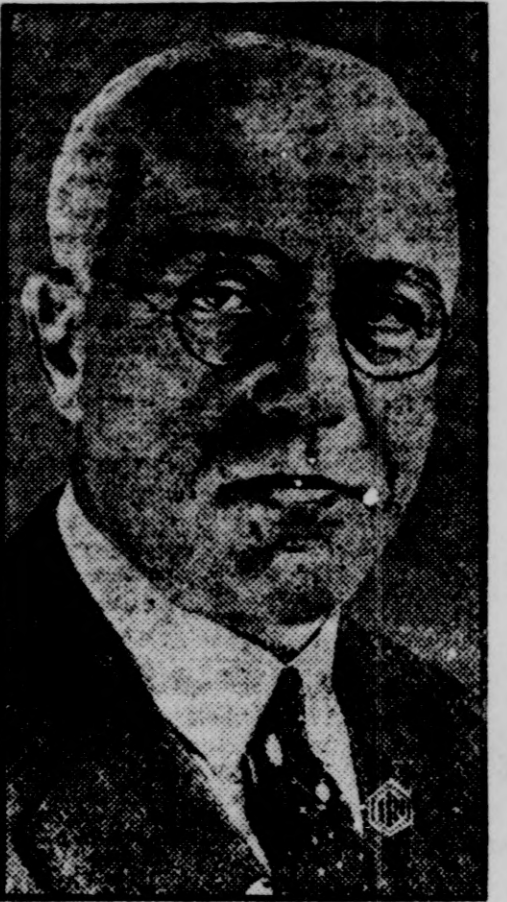

The persistent ringing of his telephone finally awakened Major Muller. He discovered that his home was burning when he got up to answer the telephone.

Major Muller carried his wife and children to safety and was able to remove most of his furniture before the house burned down. However, he was burned severely on his hands and arms and probably will be laid up for several weeks.

Divorce Asked On Adultery Grounds

ARREST EXPECTED POLICEMAN SAYS

(International News Service)
SEAT PLEASANT, Md., Jan. 3.—The fiend who sent a bomb to Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady, 18, expectant mother in the form of a Christmas box, which killed her and almost wiped out the Hall family New Year's day, claimed another victim with the death of Samuel Hall, 19 months old.

The four other members of the family of John S. Hall, grave digger are said to be recovering, but they will be disfigured for life except for Mrs. Margaret Bromley, 86, the dead girl's grandmother. Despite her age, Mrs. Bromley was able to leave the hospital, having suffered only shock.

Mrs. Nora Hall, Naomi's mother who lost an eye and suffered abdominal injuries, was kept in ignorance of the death of her baby. Physicians are watching closely the condition of Dorothy Hall, 4, who was more seriously hurt than the others. Leslie Hall, 16, lost two fingers, but otherwise was not badly injured.

While hospital physicians are doing their best for the injured, County Policeman Frank Prince expects soon to arrest a middle aged rejected suitor for the hand of Naomi Hall whose secret marriage to Henry Brady, 22, a neighboring farmer was announced a few days before the tragedy.

Harvard's Expenses $11,608,095 In Year

(International News Service)
CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 3.—What a headache old John Harvard would have if he could come back and behold what it costs to run the great university that bears his name!

The operating expenses of Harvard University for the past year, ending June 30, 1929, were $11,608,095.10 according to the figures of Henry L. Shattuck, treasurer of the university. The largest source of income to cover these expenses was funds and gifts, which provided $5,691,539.39.

These operating expenses show an increase over the preceding 12 months of more than $1,000,000. The expenses paid from income from athletic sports and the expenses dependent upon operating income showed a reduction.

Endowment of Harvard June 30, 1929, exclusive of land and buildings used for educational purposes, was $92,978,138.11. The operating expenses for 12 months ending June 30, 1929, were $11,608,095.10.

Expenses paid from the following sources of income were as follows: funds and gifts, $5,691,539.39; tuition fees, $2,781,198.31; dormitory rentals, $768,646.95; income of dining halls and Harvard Union, $828,064.86; athletic sports, $853,445.69; other operating income, $685,199.89.

Cat Takes To Kittens She Did Not Bring In

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 3.—Mary had a little lamb, its fleece as white as snow, and everywhere that Mary went, the lamb was sure to go. It followed her to school one day. All very well for a lamb. Undoubtedly, the children loved it. But what if a skunk follows its owner to school? Well...? The subject is not being discussed by David Wallace, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Wallace, of this city.

The polecat, with two brothers, was found by young Wallace early in the summer. One has since died. The problem of rearing the two remaining ones was getting serious when in stepped "Lindy Lou", the Wallace pet cat. She had a litter of three kittens to wean, and she added the polecats. Latest reports were that the entire group of cats were getting along nicely. Despite the fact that she is a stepmother, "Lindy Lou" is not showing any partiality.

Anti-Saloon League To Meet In Detroit

(International News Service)
DETROIT, Jan. 3.—Assembling in Detroit on January 15, delegates of the Anti-Saloon League will hold a five day convention and celebration of the thirty-sixth birthday of their organization, it was announced recently by the Rev. N. Holsapple, head of the Michigan branch of the league.

The convention will bring to the city the nation's leading dries including William E. "Pussyfoot" Johnson, Dr. F. Scott McBride, United States Senator Morris Shephard of Texas and Judge Florence Allen of the Ohio supreme court.

Day sessions will be held in convention headquarters in the Hotel Statler. Evening and Sunday meetings will be held in the Central Methodist church. Problems of law enforcement will occupy the delegates at most of the sessions.

stored there. Police believe that she knows nothing of the shooting or of the whereabouts of the pair.

The car stolen from Horton was stripped of license plates when found but its general description tallied so closely to that of the missing automobile that Officer Megale continued his search. He found a Christmas card addressed to R. C. Horton and was then certain of its rightful owner. Mr. Horton was notified by telephone late Thursday.

The finding of the car in the section where it was found is another link in the chain of evidence against Irene Schroeder. She was formerly located in this part of Wheeling. She has a brother living on Wheeling Island at the present time.

Mid-west Searching.
From Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, the search for the bandits has widened to the middle west. While her brother was a prisoner in the state prison at Jefferson City, Mo., the Schroeder woman was known to frequent places in that district. With the thought that she might have gone out there, Captain Mauk has asked Missouri police to search for her, and every squad room in the middle west has a description of the woman and her companions and every officer is under instructions to look for them.

Donnie Schroeder, four and a half year old son of the woman wanted for the murder of Brady Paul, is still in charge of the authorities, although he has been removed from the Colonial hotel. It was stated that he had been taken to a more private place where he would not be annoyed by curious minded visitors. Several pictures of suspects were shown him on Thursday but he did not recognize any of them.

Denies Statement.
In a late edition of a Pittsburgh paper Thursday afternoon District Attorney-elect John S. Powers was quoted as having severely criticized the state police for their activities in the case and was quoted as having said that the police were holding up the case in the hope of collecting the rewards offered.

When the article was drawn to Mr. Powers' attention he was indignant and made the following blanket denial: "The statement credited to me in which it is said that I denounced the methods of the state police and the highway patrol is untrue. I made no such statement nor do I intend to. The statement that I charged that the state police were holding up the case in order to collect rewards is also untrue."

"I do not assume the office of district attorney until January 6, and have no official connection with this case as yet. Having no official connection, I am not familiar with any of the investigations or any of the methods employed and certainly did not charge any officer with misconduct or with attempting to hold up the case."

"The statement that Donnie Schroeder would not be used as a witness against his mother is in part true. If the case is tried by me there is a possibility that the testimony of the boy would not be needed. However this is a matter to be decided upon when the trial begins."

Conversation Only.
Commenting upon the incidents leading up to the statement charged to Mr. Powers he said: "The gentleman whose name appears over the article in question met me in the lunch room of the Colonial hotel. He proceeded to express his dissatisfaction with the state police and cited several instances which he said existed. I said to him that if such things existed they were not proper. Later he asked me if I would care to make a statement criticizing the state police and state highway patrol and I immediately told him that I certainly would not make any such statement, that I was not yet in office and that it would be ridiculous for me to attempt to criticize an investigation in which I had had no part. During the entire conversation a representative of the New Castle News was present and can verify these facts."

"No one was more surprised at this alleged statement of mine, than myself," said Mr. Powers. "When I assume the duties of district attorney on Monday, January 6, I expect to pick up this case at that point and know that for my facts I must depend upon the files and statements of the state police and the highway patrol. As district attorney I expect to work in harmony with these departments, as my predecessor has done."

According to a local restaurant man, the bandit gang was in his place the day before the crime was committed, he believes. The party which stopped and took their meal there consisted of two men, a woman and little boy, and after seeing the pictures of little Donnie Schroeder, he is convinced they were the ones. They sat the lad up on a small counter in one end of the restaurant. Patrons who were in the restaurant at the time, remarked about the coarse appearance and actions of the party. The older of the two men was described by him as being rather sunken cheeked, with a pointed chin.

He states that while they were in the restaurant eating, they had their chains put on, by a garage man across the street.

Jack Dye and L. J. Blair, expected to be away for month of January

Jack Dye, Mahoningtown ticket agent of the Pennsylvania railroad and L. J. Blair another local Pennsylvania employee are leaving Saturday morning for an extended visit to southern points and parts of Cuba.

Enroute south they will stop at Jacksonville, Fla., points in Alabama and then embark for a journey across to Havana, Cuba.

The entire trip will probably be of one month's duration.

Nation's Treasury Balance Shows Big Increase In 1929

Uncle Sam Richer By Some $175,000,000 At End Of 1929 Is Revealed
Today

SURPLUS SHOWN OF $91,544,655

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Uncle Sam went into the new year $175,000,000 "better off" than January 1, 1929.

The treasury announced today the year ended with a surplus of $91,544,655, compared to a deficit of $168,475,696 the same date in 1928. This apparent advantage of $269,119,000 was reduced $85,000,000 owing to a smaller operation in the sinking funds which must be made up later in the fiscal year.

Even considering the $160,000,000 income and corporation tax cut, a little over half of which will be effective this fiscal year, the treasury should have a substantial surplus June 30.

Total receipts for the first half of the fiscal year amounted to $2,077,539,000, an increase of $210,000,000 over the same period last year. The gain was principally attributable to a collection of $1,185,317,000 in income and corporation taxes, which showed an increase of $173,000,000.

Customs receipts were $302,214,000, an increase of $436,000, and miscellaneous internal revenue netted $318,493,000 for a gain of $15,000,000, due to materially increased cigarette taxes.

During the half-year the government obtained $121,378,000 from foreign powers on the war debts, somewhat more than last year.

Cost Increases.
Total expenditures amounted to $1,985,894,000, a decrease of $51,000,000 owing to the fact that there was a drop of $95,000,000 in securities purchased for the sinking fund as compared to the same period last year.

The cost of government departments and establishments was $1,112,000,000, an increase of $72,000,000. Interest on the public debt required an outlay of $328,492,000, a decrease of $9,000,000. Refunds of internal revenue amounted to $51,925,000, a decline of $37,000,000, while customs refunds of $10,439,000 were slightly less. The postal deficit was $35,000,000, greater by $5,000,000. Ordinary expenditures amounted to $1,601,089,000.

Operations in the public debt were considerably smaller than in the first half of the 1928-1929 fiscal year. Issues of securities amounted to $1,756,630,000, a decrease of $1,199,000,000. Owing to the utilization of heavier income tax collections for debt reduction purposes, retirements were $2,386,697,000, a decrease of $864,000,000.

At the end of the fiscal year the debt amounted to $16,390,921,000, a decrease of $1,009,000,000 in a year, and $10,296,000,000 since the peak August 31, 1919.

Investors were losing the interest on government securities amounting to $39,561,000, which have not been turned in for redemption. There was $12,927,000 of the third liberty loan, which matured in 1928; $7,196,000 of the second liberty loan of 1927 and $12,801,000 in certificates outstanding on which interest has ceased.

Wrote His Will On Prescription Blank

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Jan. 3.—A will written on a prescription blank furnished by a physician attending him in his last illness and signed with a cross not because the man didn't know how to write but because an arm injury prevented his writing was allowed in probate court by Judge John A. Denison. George Gero was named as administrator.

The unusual testament was that of John Spring Jr. and was being contested by his daughter Mrs. Emily Benn.

Mr. Spring 82, died September 5. He had sustained a severe fall the day before and summoned Dr. Walter A. Shaw. Feeling that he would not recover he drew a prescription blank from Dr. Shaw and dictated the will to an attendant at his bedside. In the fall he had injured his arm so that he was unable to sign the will himself so he filled in a cross beside his name.

The will, one of the shortest on record here contained only 28 words and is as follows: "I, John Spring, Jr., leave all my personal and real estate to my wife except one automobile I leave to Adell Dupis. This is my last will." Dr. Shaw headed the list of four witnesses.

THE BEAN IS A FRUIT AND NOT A VEGETABLE

(International News Service)
SACRAMENTO, Jan. 3.—Here's a "Believe it or Not" which commanded attention of Governor Young's cabinet today.

A bean is a fruit, not a vegetable. The explanation came when G. H. Hecke, state director of agriculture, was asked, as a session of the governor's council, if the Mediterranean fruit fly attacks vegetables as well as fruits.

"Yes, it eats beans, but a bean is a fruit, not a vegetable," explained Hecke.

Governor Young and cabinet heads registered unrestrained surprise.

Eskimo Studies King Island To Aid Scientists

By PIERRE JOUSSA, International News Service Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—On a tiny precipitous island 80 miles off the Alaskan coast in Bering sea, ice-locked nine months of the year, buffeted by smothering snow storms and arctic gales, with temperatures from 30 to 40 degrees below zero, Nagozruk, only licensed Eskimo naturalist, has taken up his abode in the interests of science.

Nagozruk is a collector of arctic and sub-arctic specimens, and was assigned to this bleak spot known as King Island by Alfred M. Bailey, director of the Chicago Academy of Sciences museum. The object is to obtain a complete collection of birds and mammals inhabiting the island.

Cliff Dwellers.
King Island is one of the few places in North America that has not been thoroughly investigated by naturalists, Mr. Bailey pointed out. A dozen hardy Eskimo hunters and their families, about 40 souls in all, comprise the population. The island is about three-quarters of a mile long and a half mile wide.

It is precipitous that there is no place level enough for hut foundations, and the houses of the settlement are erected on high piles. For this reason the King Island Eskimos are known as "cliff dwellers."

For some nine months of the year the islanders are locked in by immense fields of ice, and cut off from all communication from the outside world. Their homes are on the south wall of the island, and the time is spent in hunting the bullhead whale and the walrus, and carving ivory, in which they are quite skillful.

Several years ago four of the hunters were carried off on a huge sheet of ice which broke away from the island, and they drifted for eleven days before reaching shore. For food they shot seals, and water was obtained by warming snow inside their parkas.

As the island has never been visited by zoologists, Mr. Bailey is convinced important collections will be made by Nagozruk. Despite the almost paralyzing cold, numerous specimens of Siberian and North American birds make this island a gathering place.

Nagozruk recently reported that he has joined the "cliff dwellers." After spending several weeks at Nome, they boarded their skin boats and were towed to the island by a United States government coast guard cutter for nine months more of isolation. Every year when the waters open for navigation the hunters and their families paddle their skin boats to Nome to sell their produce, take a "vacation" and then return for the closed season.

Great Lover Is Bust In Talkies All Now Agree

By HARRISON CARROLL
International News Service Special Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 3.—All hands in Hollywood are showering blows upon that romantic screen tradition, the great lover.

Not even John Barrymore is an exception.

During an interview in the actor's private olympus, from which one overlooks Los Angeles, Beverly Hills and the sea "That public has outgrown the great lover."

Naturally, neither Mr. Barrymore nor any sane person expects the type to disappear entirely from the screen but he suggests that it will be taken less seriously.

"After all," explained the star of

"Don Juan," "Your true amorist is a very unhumorous sort of person. We played him heroically in the silent pictures, but in the talkies, with their added realism, make this ridiculous."

Not Unbroken Luck
"Most of the great lovers of the silent films always won out. You got to the point where you learned for someone to hit them over the head with a beer bottle."

No such unbroken run of luck follows the hero of "General Crack," Barrymore's first talkie.

"General Crack," confided the star, "marries a gypsy girl and she betrays him with one of his friends. Upon discovering this, Crack, being a profound character, decides to get even with the friend by betraying his sister. "When he attempts to do this, instead of resisting the girl throws her arms around his neck and prepares to yield to him. Crack is outraged. He is supposed to be attacking the girl."

Audience Amused
"All of this gives the audience a chance to be amused at the great lover, and makes of him a very human figure."

That incidentally, is the impression I got of Barrymore. He seems the least sardonic of his family, and the easiest to talk to.

In addition to airing his views on "Great Lovers," the star informed me that he would like to do "Hamlet" on the screen; also he seldom goes to the theatres.

"I'm afraid," he confessed, "that I have never cared as much for the theatre as I should, considering that it is the excuse for our existence."

Unfortunately, Mr. Barrymore's further reflections were interrupted by an unmistakable snore. It took but a moment to discover the culprit, an old arduale dog, lying upon a rug nearby.

The Barrymore gaze fixed upon him indulgently.

"My severest critic," he said.

Most Persons Are "Shot" By Camera About Nine Times During Lifetime

According to a local photographer the average person is "shot," photographically speaking, about nine times during his lifetime.

The first is generally taken at the age of 6 months, at this time the unwilling subject is carried to the photographer by the fond young parents. This first is the one where Jane is clothed in a cute baby smile, and is destroyed about 16 years later by Miss Jane.

From the age of 6 months to a year the young hopeful is too busy to visit the studio, so at the age of one year he appears on the scene to be "shot" in a pose which will show the remarkable strides made in the past 6 months. Bravely holding on to a chair he poses for the second of the series.

After another year of ordinary activity comes the third picture. From the third most people miss a few years until the finish of High School then comes the one taken at the time of graduation. Next is the college graduation, and five are now accounted for.

But, says our authority the probability is that along through here at least one more will be worked in so we had better say 6.

Number seven is very important, as about this time the subject turns toward the church and the next photograph shows the happy couple with a lot of unnecessary looking people in the background, with full-dress and flowers in profusion.

The eighth is the one taken at the time the grown children leave to go away to school, and to finish it off nine shows the proud grandfather.

as is their usual custom at the Christmas dance. The members decided to hold their dance on the last Thursday of each month.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, J. C. Martin; Vice President, S. A. Linton; Treasurer, Earl Pettit and Secretary, Mrs. David Richeal.

Search For Evans City Man Missing Four Days Futile

Police And Boy Scouts Of District Keep Up Hunt Begun Sunday Night

EVANS, CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—Although Evans City, Zelienople and Mars police, directing patrols of Boy Scouts, have searched for John Hartley Caldwell, 24, missing Evans City man, since Sunday night, no trace of Caldwell has been found.

Caldwell, said to be subject to attacks of epilepsy, disappeared last Friday afternoon while on his way home from Evans City stores, and it is feared that he may have suffered a recurrence of the malady in the woods and ravines which lead to his home.

Caldwell was traced to the bank of a creek near Evans City when tracks were found by Boy Scouts, but the trace was lost when the tracks stopped at the creek.

Workmen near the creek reported that they saw a man apparently wading in the creek Friday evening, but paid little attention to him, although they were surprised at his actions.

When last seen in Evans City, the missing man wore brown corduroy trousers, a light colored cap and tan shoes. He is five feet nine inches in height, weighs 175 pounds and has gray eyes and a fair complexion, according to Chief Lee Keely of the Evans City police, who has charge of the search.

Youth Arrested Near Harmony Is Detained

HARMONY, Pa., Jan. 3.—Harry Smith, 19, who was caught late last Friday night near Harmony by state police, who were guarding roads in this district after the escape of the killers of Corporal Brady Paul, was held for further questioning after a hearing before Alderman Carl G. Phillips last night.

Smith was driving a car reported to have been stolen in Youngstown last week, according to the state police, who charged him with transporting a stolen car in interstate commerce.

After his arrest, Smith was placed in a cell at the barracks, and was later questioned by the police, who are not satisfied with the story given by the youth.

Smith claimed he lived in Youngstown, but was unable to identify Idora park, well known Youngstown resort, the police say, and other holes in his story were found which may indicate his complicity in holdups in this district, it is said.

At the time of his arrest, Smith carried a gun, it is alleged.

Two Asphyxiated Aboard Steamer

(International News Service.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—Two men were asphyxiated Thursday by bilge gas aboard the intercoastal Panama Pacific liner California in the drydock of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company.

Carl Olsen, steamfitter, was first overcome while repairing a leak in the bottom of a water tank, and Theodore Wall, 27, junior engineer of the California, died in an effort to rescue him.

The California, which plies between San Francisco and New York, was in drydock for her annual overhauling.

Wall's home was said to be in New York.

Last Chance To Win Bonus Points Given For Members Signed Up In 1929

MEDIA, Pa., Jan. 3.—Darby's village blacksmith is going to church. Next Sunday he'll be in a pew. His son will be beside him. They'll be there again next Sunday, too. And every other Sunday until December 20, 1934.

At least that is the order of Judge Albert Dutton MacDade. Furthermore, the father must sell his son's automobile, pronto. It is all a result of a little $4.07 job

the boy and two companions "pulled off."

The blacksmith is John W. Parrish. His son bears the same name and is eighteen. The youth's companions in the little crime venture were George Farmer, twenty-two, and Fred Williams, eighteen.

The Parrish boy at first was sentenced to the reformatory, but later the judge imposed the "joint church attendance" and auto sale penalty. Parrish was given the maximum sentence of eight years in the Eastern Penitentiary and Williams was sent to Huntingdon Reformatory.

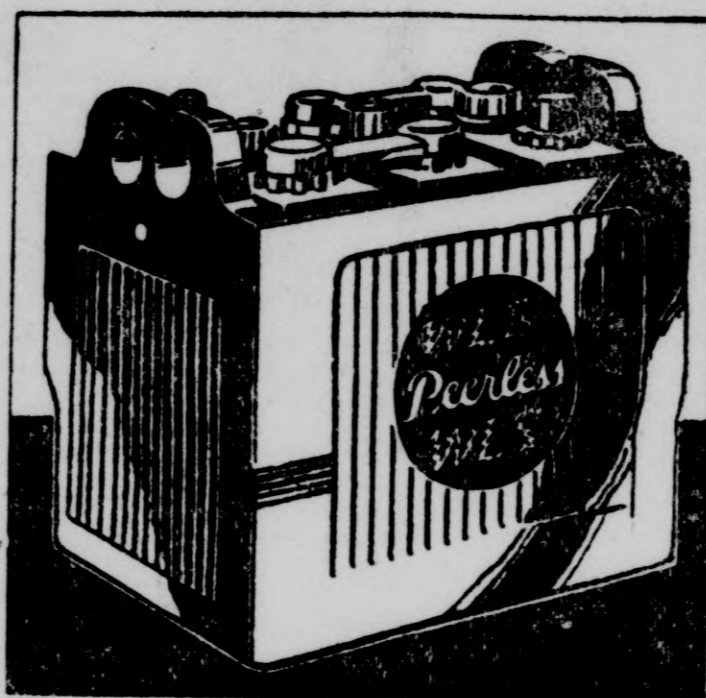

Karl Marx's Remains Not Going To Russia
(International News Service.)
LONDON, Jan. 3.—Reports that Communist International contemplates negotiating for the removal of the body of Karl Marx from London to Russia are discredited in Communist circles here.

Marx died in London in 1883 and is buried at Highgate Cemetery, on the outskirts of London. The reports declare it is the intention of the International to place his body in Lenin's tomb in the Red Square at Moscow.

"We have not been approached officially by Moscow," said the secretary of the Communist Party of Great Britain, "and don't believe there is any truth to the story."

Are Sentenced To 4 Years In Church

Last Chance To Win Bonus Points Given For Members Signed Up In 1929

MEDIA, Pa., Jan. 3.—Darby's village blacksmith is going to church. Next Sunday he'll be in a pew. His son will be beside him. They'll be there again next Sunday, too. And every other Sunday until December 20, 1934.

At least that is the order of Judge Albert Dutton MacDade. Furthermore, the father must sell his son's automobile, pronto. It is all a result of a little $4.07 job

the boy and two companions "pulled off."

The blacksmith is John W. Parrish. His son bears the same name and is eighteen. The youth's companions in the little crime venture were George Farmer, twenty-two, and Fred Williams, eighteen.

The Parrish boy at first was sentenced to the reformatory, but later the judge imposed the "joint church attendance" and auto sale penalty. Parrish was given the maximum sentence of eight years in the Eastern Penitentiary and Williams was sent to Huntingdon Reformatory.

Virginia Faces Need Of Doubling Its Jails

All Prisons Filled And Strain On System Shows No Sign Of Diminishing

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 3.—Virginia has 3,447 State prisoners quartered besides 2,000 others in various localities, with all jails full. Frank Bane, Commissioner of Public Welfare, revealed. It is apparent that the present strain on the prison system will not diminish, he said.

The present population of the Virginia State Penitentiary is 765, although it is constructed to house but 650. These figures, however, while above the saturation point, are better than those of other States.

The State farm is full to capacity with 215 convicts and 463 misdemeanants. A year ago there were 192 convicts and 256 misdemeanants at the farm. Figures submitted from the various road camps show that there are 1,973 prisoners at work, as compared with 1,855 a year ago.

Major Rice M. Youell, Superintendent of the State Penitentiary, reported that conditions at the penitentiary are much better than in most of the prisons, "for it has not been made necessary here to put men in the corridors and institutional buildings, as is the case in some other places."

Walker C. Cottrell, Chairman of the State Prison Board, said provisions for doubling the cell space may be necessary within two years at the present rate of entry into the institution.

Seek Better Grass For Golf Courses
STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Jan. 3.—Pennsylvania golfers may expect to play on better greens and fairways if experiments being conducted here on turf grasses prove as successful as is anticipated.

Golf clubs of the state have asked for the experiments and are contributing to the expenses of carrying on the work. Under the proposed plans the research work is divided into two parts. One phase of the experiment, which will take eight years for completion, is to determine the effect of soil acidity on the growth of turf grasses and its controlling influence on the growth of weeds. Professor

J. W. White, in charge of soil research; H. B. Musser, assistant professor of experimental agronomy, and C. D. Jeffries, assistant professor of soil research, are in charge of this work.

A second part of the experiment has been planned to improve turf grass stains by breeding and selection, with the development of superior turfs the object. This work will run for 10 years and will be taken care of by J. S. Cobb, assistant professor of agronomy, and Professor Musser.

Plots were seeded last spring and strain tests begun. Laboratory work is now in progress. Later, the cooperation of college plant pathologists will be enlisted to determine disease resistance of the strains.

INSURANCE REPORT REVEALS FIGURES

By FREDERIC A. CHASE
International News Service Staff
Correspondent
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 3.—At 25, a girl's chances of marriage begin rapidly to diminish, according to a statistical report of an insurance company.
But a number of prominent film and stage actresses have different opinions, based on experience.
The insurance report said most girls marry between 17 and 25 and concludes that those are the really nubile ages.
Mrs. James Gleason, stage and film actress and co-author of several successful plays, married when both she and her husband were under age. "To her, marriage comes not at any particular age, but because of certain qualities of individual appeal whether 18 or 30."
Mary Eaton, screen star who will wed Millard Webb, at 26, said happiest brides were those over 25.
Natalie Moorhead, a Pittsburgh girl who recently entered pictures, said she observed many second marriages that turned out better than too early ventures in matrimony. "It is not wild romance but companionship after 25 that forms the lasting foundation of happy marriages," she said.

According to Louise Fazenda, "I have seen more successful marriages when the participants wed after 25 than I have boy and girl marriages. Girls need not go into a panic over the life insurance report that their chances dwindle to nothing after they pass 25."
All the gates that One-Eyed Connolly has crashed in his day placed end to end would stupify the statisticians, but One-Eyed today had found one gate he could not crash.
It was the gate to a job in the talking pictures.
Every time Connolly slips past a gate keeper he sets a new record for total gates entered without compensation. So when he took off his cap and asked for a studio job, he set another record.
The break in the series of gate crashings following the successful entry of Connolly upon the scenes of the Walker-Huddins middleweight title fight and the California-U. S. C. football game here.
But One-Eyed today feared he lost caste with his numerous sporting editors and Hollywood sportsman friends.
Perhaps though, Hollywood can arrange it. The film colony had its laugh over a yarn which a British wag told Fannie Brice and it may laugh Connolly into a job.
The story teller said:
"When King George was deathly ill, one of his nobleman physicians opened his bag to administer a medicine when something popped out with startling suddenness. It was a very delicate situation for all concerned."
"I'll bite," Miss Brice said she replied. "What popped out?"
"Why, One-Eyed Connolly!"
Connolly didn't see the point of that story. At one studio he was asked how he got inside.
"Mistakes," said Connolly with dignity. "If you knew how I got places you'd be a millionaire."

Young Wife Enforces Law In Texas County

Chief Deputy Sheriff Wears A Gun And Chases Bootleggers

ODESSA, Tex., Jan. 3.—Mrs. Charlie M. Matthews, chief deputy sheriff of Ector county, a pretty young woman with blue eyes and a mass of brown hair, is the first to greet and serve the visitor at the office of Sheriff Reeder Webb at the Ector county court house, whether to pay taxes, get auto license plates or make complaint against some hijacker, robber or bootlegger she is ready to issue the license, give a tax receipt or immediately give chase and, if possible, make the arrest.
She is bookkeeper, stenographer and officer for this entire large oil belt section of southwest Texas. Several times last year when called upon with no other officers available she has gone out and made arrests and has often accompanied the sheriff in chases for bandits and hijackers.
She carries a pistol in a holster attached to a belt around her waist. When asked recently where her badge was, she replied, "Oh, I left it on my other dress!"
Mrs. Matthews is a crack shot with rifle, shotgun or pistol, and is very fond of fishing, hunting and all outdoor sports and few men can beat her in bagging most any kind of game. She is perfectly at home on the back of a horse, fond of riding and is typical of the modern west Texas ranch girl.

French Courts Frees Husband Of Wife's Bills

By ALICE LANGELEIR
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

PARIS, Jan. 3.—A husband is not always obliged to pay the debts of his wife, according to the civil court of Lyon which has recently been called upon to settle a family dispute.
Madame Dupont likes pretty things to wear and during the past year managed to spend about $3,000 in one of the largest and best shops in Lyon. Upon receiving the bills, Monsieur Dupont, furious, declared he would not pay them, whereupon the proprietor brought suit against him.
Nevertheless, realizing that the annual revenue of the couple amounted to very little more than the total sum owed to the furnisher and thus, Monsieur Dupont certainly would never have agreed in advance to allow his worthy wife to spend so much of the income. Consequently, the husband could not be expected to pay for things purchased without his consent.
Nevertheless, realizing that the community must have some profit from its citizens, it was agreed that Mr. Dupont should pay in accordance with the utility of the objects bought by his wife and thus was condemned to pay four hundred dollars for her extravagance.

Egyptian Fishermen Have Much Good Luck

ALEXANDRIA, Jan. 3.—Fishermen in Egypt have all the luck.
The government even maintains a special committee to discover the choicest fishing spots and to give expert advice to fishers.
This committee has just been organized at the instigation and under the direction of H. Wembyen, an expert and enthusiast of the clan of Isaac Wembyen.
A special coast guard boat and crew who are all piscatorial specialists now patrol the coast in the interests of fishing. They discover the places where different fish abound and pass on the precious information.
In return, the fishermen are taxed 10 per cent of their profits by the government.

U. S. Stops Machine "Curing" 84 Diseases

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Federal Trade Commission threw a monkey wrench in the disease destroying machine of Joseph P. Sereda of Chicago. Sereda professed ability to cure eighty-four diseases with his violet ray machine but the commission said he should "cease and desist."
The builder of the machine advertised to eliminate many things from dandruff on the head to bunion on the feet, contended that he got results by the use of a violet ray. The commission declared the ray produced by the machine was in no way similar to "ultra violet rays" and its application was merely a superficial stimulation, such as might be obtained by the application of turpentine or an ointment containing red pepper.
A record distribution of 7,060,000,000 fish in fresh and salt water streams throughout the United States during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1929, has been reported by the U. S. department of commerce.

KONJOLA STRIKES DEATH BLOW TO DREAD NEURITIS

Eight Years Of Suffering Quickly
Ended By New and Different Medicine.

MISS BLANCHE BAVER

"Konjola scored a splendid triumph in my case after all other medicines and treatments had failed," said Miss Blanche Baver, 231 Tilghman street, Allentown, Pa. "For eight years I was a victim of neuritis. Frightful pains racked my entire body. My arms, limbs and ankles swelled until I was helpless. No medicine helped me and I had given up hope.
Several of my friends had been relieved by Konjola and I began taking it. Imagine my surprise and relief when, at the end of the first week, I realized that I had found the right medicine. The pains were swept from my system, the swelling disappeared and before a month had elapsed my neuritis had entirely left me. It seems impossible that one medicine could do all Konjola did for me. Eight years of agony ended in one month; how I wish every sufferer from neuritis would try this great medicine."
Konjola is sold in New Castle at Love & Megown drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

NEW MEDICINE HELPED HER IN WONDERFUL WAY

Local Lady's Several Ailments Relieved By Ten Herbs, Whole System Benefited.

One of the pleasing things about Ten Herbs, the famous new herbal medicine with the ten wonderful health-restoring products of Nature, is that it not only ends the ailments for which it is intended—stomach, liver, kidney and bowel disorders, rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness—but also cleanses and invigorates the whole human system, bringing new feelings of health and strength over the body in general. No wonder so many words of praise for Ten Herbs are heard at Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., 30 East Washington Street, this city, where this highly successful compound is being introduced.

"Ten Herbs not only relieved my ailments, but also helped my whole system," was the recent statement of Mrs. Mary Oleszycki, 1902 Penn Avenue, New Castle. "Your medicine really benefited me in a wonderful way. Before taking Ten Herbs, I was in a badly run-down condition, being very weak. My appetite failed me, and what little I ate caused pains, due to indigestion. I seemed to fill with gas, and a sour substance came up in my throat. I was so nervous that the least thing would annoy me. Severe headaches came on me, and at times I got terribly dizzy. There were sharp pains in my back and loins, and my rest was broken by my having to arise several times during the night.
"After reading about Ten Herbs in the paper, I started taking your medicine and it soon put me on the road to health. My stomach improved, and I had a better appetite. Gas, pains and nauseated feeling were relieved. Dizzy spells disappeared, and I gained relief from headaches. My nerves became strong, and the pains in my back and loins were relieved. Then I began to enjoy a good night's rest. My strength picked up so that I could work without feeling exhausted. I have recommended Ten Herbs in the past, and will continue to endorse your medicine in the future."
Ten Herbs is being introduced at Eckerd's of New Castle, Inc., 30 East Washington Street, this city, and is sold at all drug and medicine stores throughout this entire section.

P. H. C. Sends Treat To Little "Donnie"

Youngster Is Remembered When Christmas Treat Is Being Distributed

The annual Christmas party of the P. H. C. for the members and their children was held Wednesday evening in the Malta hall, following a short business meeting of the circle the doors were thrown open and the happy throng of children entered.
A large number of children with their parents enjoyed the following program:
A waltz clog was done in a very skillful manner by pretty little Betty Jayne Buchanan.
A piano solo was rendered by Margaret Leslie which received many rounds of applause.
A Dutch dance by Mary Eileen Wray and Nedra Sergeant. The clever costumes gave a real atmosphere of Holland. Very pretty did these two young people portray their parts.
A jazz dance was very cleverly done by dainty little Helen Hume, who is really a born dancer.
A song and dance by Jane Batch and Betty Jayne Buchanan pleased everyone by the very original manner in which it was executed.
You should have been there to see the main feature of the program. Little B. Jones sang for us two of her famous Dutch songs which was the success of the program.
The usual Christmas committee had charge of the treat and entertainment with Mrs. Hammond in charge with her committee of Roy Erwin, Gertrude Halboth, Ida Patton, A. L. Conn, Gladys Erwin, Mildred Rodgers and Leonard Dandy.
Every one was made happy with their treats. With all their pleasure the P. H. C. did not forget that in the city of New Castle we have a little stranger, "Donnie" and George Wyman delivered him a treat and he too was very happy.

New Type Airplanes At February Show

(International News Service.)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The New York Aircraft Show to be held by Aviators Post No. 743 American Legion at Grand Central Palace in February will produce more actual sales of aircraft than any other aircraft show ever held is the prediction of Thomas L. Hill, President of The American Society for Promotion of Aviation.
Hill bases his prediction upon the fact that there is at present considerable over-production in the aircraft industry especially in the light airplane class and that manufacturers

Prohibition Still Lively Issue After Ten Years; At Nation's Capital

By ARTHUR C. WIMER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 3.—After a bewildering whirl at life for a decade filled with caresses and rebuffs, the national prohibition youngster on January 16 will celebrate his tenth anniversary amid a more pronounced rattle of politician's words and coast guard machine guns than has been heard since official Washington on January 16, 1920 declared that "the manufacture, sale or transportation of liquors within the United States is prohibited."

On the eve of this tenth anniversary, the prohibition issue remains the subject of bitter strife. Invectives fly thick and fast. Personal friendships are destroyed; political connections are severed.

A member of Congress describes his colleagues shouting for more stringent enforcement as "rats leaving a sinking ship."

One of the leading newspapers of the Nation's Capital on New Year's Eve prints the notice that "the price of liquor had not gone up last night and no shortage was expected."

The same paper gives much space to stories telling of the capture of 23 men landing liquor on a nearby coast intended for Washington, of Senator Brach's sending a secret missive to the White House, of the United States Attorney in the Capital nolle prosequing seven prohibition cases in utter defiance of an order sent out by the United States Attorney General.

This liquor issue seems to have created a new order of things on Capitol Hill. All caution is thrown to the winds. With utter abandonment members of Congress dictate statements for publication.

In the ordinary course of legislation, procuring comment from Senators and Representatives is rather unexciting routine for newspaper men. The legislators act bored or benign and voice sane, logical assertions for the reading public.

But during the past several days, even experienced old correspondents on Capitol Hill have been made dizzy by the barrage of prohibition statements flying from all quarters.

It virtually becomes dangerous to walk from the office of a dry into the den of a wet. Tell the anti that the pro has just made a statement and there comes a gleam into the eye of the anti.

He calls his stenographer. Type-writers click madly. An there is another contribution to the tournament of the statements.

There is, of course, a great deal of sincerity participating in this prohibition enforcement controversy which has so aroused Washington. But there is, as well, a petty hypocrisy which is amusing in its weakness.

Members of Congress, particularly those of the House, may present to the correspondent of papers in their districts interviews in which opposition to large prohibition enforcement appropriations is voiced.

The statement from one of these Congressmen is wired to the local paper back home, printed, and on that same night the Congressman begins to receive from the W. C. T. U. of his district telegrams attacking him for his attitude. Frightened, the Congressman telephones the correspondent, tells him he made his statement a little too strong, and requests the correspondent to square things back home by writing a story more pleasing to the dries.

Sincerity and insincerity in Congress alike, however, to a great degree are ready to admit that the eighteenth amendment will remain a part of the Constitution.

Back in 1918 and 1919 when the amendment was ratified, thirteen states could have killed national prohibition by rejecting the proposed amendment. But now 13 states can prevent repeal of the amendment by refusing to vote for the repeal, and despite the maelstrom of strife whirling about the prohibition enforcement problem, there are few leaders who argue that they truthfully feel the eighteenth amendment could be wiped from the Constitution.

Were that amendment to be repealed, it would be the first amendment to the Constitution ever to suffer that fate.

Fear Talkies Losing Popularity In Britain

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Is the talking film already losing popularity in Britain? The Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association seem to think that it is.

Gavazzi King, of this Association, states that "talkies" are being shown at a loss in most movies in Britain and adds that the opinion of exhibitors is found to be absolutely unanimous, that "the present conditions spell little short of ruin."

"All evidence shows," says King, "that silent houses have only suffered temporarily."

"District near large populous centers have had their clients drawn away for brief periods, but the silent picture has steadily maintained its own, and in some cases has proved more than usually profitable."

"There is no doubt that the silent film is still the most popular and this opinion is gathered from movie theatres in all parts of Britain."

Inability To Read Costs Baby's Life

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Rosa Delmastro of No. 150 Navy street, Brooklyn, never learned to read.

So, when her little daughter Nicolina, 2½-months old, had a fit of coughing early yesterday, Mrs. Delmastro was unable to tell a bottle of disinfectant from a bottle of cough medicine. The child died in the way to Cumberland hospital, whither she was carried by Mrs. Delmastro and her husband, Tony, after she was stricken with convulsions.

At the hospital it was said the child died of the disinfectant poisoning. Police verified the fact that the mother could not read and listed the death as an accident.

Americans To Build Plants For Russia

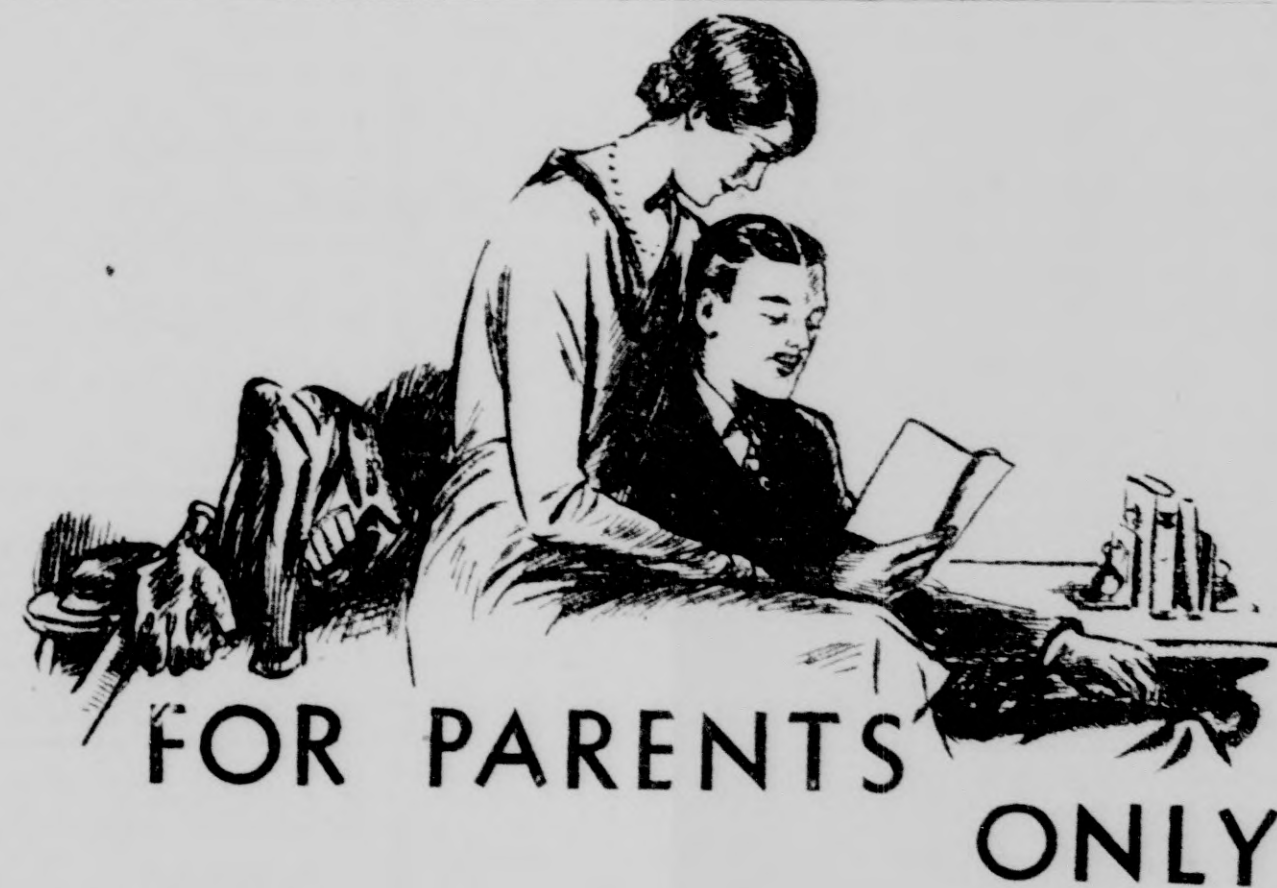

(International News Service)

MOSCOW, Jan. 3.—In preparation for anticipated resumption of grain exports, according to the five-year plan, in one or two years, the Soviet government has signed a contract with the MacDonald Engineering company of Chicago for technical assistance in the construction of huge concrete grain elevators and cold storage plants.

The total value of the constructions is estimated at about $75,000,000 over a period of several years, the investments being made by the Soviet government. The Donald company has contracted to draft the plans and supervise the construction on a cost plus basis with a staff of 40 engineers and construction men. It does not undertake to obtain loans or credits. The financing of the enterprise and the furnishing of labor and materials is in the hands of the government.

If there is a bit of hard cheese left do not throw it away. Put it in the vegetable soup with a few celery seeds while boiling for a pleasing flavor.

Gloves for evening wear are revived this season. Long kid and lambskin are popular in white and colors.

THE Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture labors in behalf of the betterment of the human race. Study, experiment and observation, by scientists connected with this body, to create a perfect diet for the growing child, disclose the paramount importance of bread made with milk as a regular feature in the daily menu. It contains calories for energy, proteins for muscle and sinew and calcium for bones and teeth.

Bread occupies an important place in the diet of the normal individual, and properly baked bread, made with milk, is a wholesome, nutritious and inexpensive food.

Erects 3-Room House At Cost Of Only $50

HOLLAND, Mich., Jan. 3.—Rather than become an object of charity when his home burned, Fred Baldwin has become probably the smallest taxpayer of the city of Holland. That is, for a person owning his own home.

He built his house for $50. Lumber was secured from salvage of a demolished factory at a cost of $20 per 1,000 feet. The house consists of three rooms—a kitchen 6 by 8 feet; living room, 8 by 8 feet, and a bedroom 8 by 8 feet. In each of the rooms is a window about a foot square. The roof is fireproof but there is no siding on the structure, no plaster on the inside and no basement.

The furniture is the plainest and Baldwin does all of his own cooking. He raises vegetables in a garden that almost surrounds the house. He works at odd jobs and devotes the rest of his time to tinkering and gardening.

Calfskin suede—white with a green dot—is mentioned as a trimming for spring hats.

Philadelphia Home
Damaged By BombFive Asleep In Home Of Robert Farley, County Official, Are Uninjured

(International News Service)
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—A dynamite bomb or grenade wrecked the front of the home of Robert Farley, clerk in the register of wills office, here early today. No one was injured although the entire neighborhood was shaken.

The explosive evidently had been tied to the door knob and equipped with a fuse. It exploded about 4 a. m. A gaping hole was torn in the door and the vestibule door almost torn from its hinges. Farley, his wife and two daughters and a sister-in-law, who were asleep at the time were uninjured.

Police have been unable to uncover any cause for the mysterious attack.

Vatican Denies Gasparri Serious

(International News Service)
ROME, Jan. 3.—Reports that Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, was suffering from high fever and was in a grave condition, were denied at the Vatican today.

Vatican officials stated the reports exaggerated the Cardinal's condition and added that he has virtually recovered from the attack of influenza he suffered the beginning of this week.

Free Methodists
Begin Revivals

Last night marked the beginning of a series of revival services at the Arlington avenue Free Methodist church with Evangelist E. Ballinger and his wife in charge. An inspiring message was delivered last night to a fair audience, attendance being curtailed on account of the weather.

The meetings will continue each evening for the coming two weeks.

Dramatic Story Is Told By Miss On Street Car

Those stories, told to the class by the teacher of first grade, were amusing the ones told at camp when all lights were out and the campers were more wide awake than ever—those were rank, but the story this writer heard on a local street car Thursday afternoon takes the blue ribbon.

At the corner of Mercer and East Washington streets the writer boarded the trolley car. All was quiet until two young ladies took the car by storm at the Mill street corner. And then the fun began.

With wide open ears, (as reporter's ears usually are), the writer heard the excited voice of one of the sweet things from the seat behind him. Immediately the writer turned in on the conversation. The one excited miss did the talking. The other offered an encouraging gasp when there came a short pause in the recital for breath.

It was a snappy novel—one which this young lady had been reading. The first five or six chapters had been told before the girls had gotten on the car the writer gathered. The rest of it was something like this:

"And was he handsome, well, rather! The perfect boy friend—tall, dark, rich, 27 and unmarried. Why, no wonder little Celia or what ever her name was—no wonder she fell in love with him.

But, this girl's mother doesn't want her daughter to marry until she (the daughter) is in her 20's. She is only 17 now. Three long years, imagine!

Well, this guy is crazy about the girl and his father don't like the idea. So the Old Man, a duke, justice of the peace or some sort of a titled gink—ends Bob, the son to Africa or South America. I forgot which.

The girl's mother puts her in one of these here finishing schools to finish her up and Cecilia doesn't like it one little bit. But she stays for three years and then her mother takes her out.

She is still in love with the handsome guy I was telling you about and doesn't want to do anything but moon about him. Her mother sees that things shouldn't be like this and so writes a letter to Celia and signs it from this handsome fella Bob.

Ge, that scene was tragic when the poor kid reads that letter from her fella in Africa. The letter said he never loved her and that he had married an African dancer. The poor kid thinks it the truth and bawls and bawls about it. At last she bravely dries her bitter tears and decides to marry another boy friend who had asked her to keep steady company with him. I forgot to tell you about this other gink. She met him when she was in the finishing school.

The marriage is to be on the 8th of June and this is the 7th of June and there is only one more chapter to the book.

Oh dear, I have never been so upset about a thing in my life. Will she marry this guy or will the other guy come back from Australia in time?"

And all for one little street car check.

NEW YEAR'S TEA GIVEN AT Y. W.

Delightful Program Is Presented For Members During Afternoon

Among the many attractive New Year's social functions none was more delightful than the afternoon tea and reception given by the membership committee of the local Y. W. C. A. for its members and friends. The decorations were in the seasonal colors of red and green with poinsettias, holly and mistletoe. The table was the center of attraction with its beautiful Russian cover embroidered in red on which sparkled silver and glass. The parlors were softly lighted with lamps in green and tan.

Mrs. John E. Elliott and Mrs. Grace Phillips Johnson, president and honorary president of the Board of Directors, presided over the tea table. They were assisted by Misses Katherine Boston, Louise Fink, Mildred Rodgers, Dorothy Long, Edith Cleveland, Genevieve Hazen and Madge Gardner who are members of the Senior High School Girl Reserve Club of the Y. W. C. A.

In the receiving line were the membership committee consisting of Dr. Mildred Rogers, chairman, Mrs. J. L. Stratton, Miss Effie Butz, Miss Dell Davidson and Miss Nancy Bechtol. The committee was assisted by the members of the Board of Directors and the secretarial staff.

Throughout the afternoon a varied and delightful program was rendered. The numbers included vocal solos by Miss Rebecca Garvin and Mrs. Wm. J. Caldwell accompanied by Miss Eva Coulter. A piano solo by Miss Julia Sidley, a violin solo by Miss Ruth Bittner, readings by Miss Dorothy Eleanor Cowden, of Youngstown, selections by the Senior High School string quartet under the direction of Mr. Repligle. The quartet consisted of Miss Margaretta Hess, Messrs. John Brinco, Daniel Cassella and Victor Rice. Very attractive dances were given by Dot Cain, Dot Uselton and Betty Conover.

Dr. Rogers explained that the reception of Wednesday was given in especial recognition of the increase in membership during the past few weeks. The membership of the Association, she said, had more than doubled since December first through the quiet but very earnest work of some of the members.

Other gatherings for both the general membership and for individual groups will be held from time to time during the early part of this year, some of the latter being planned for in the immediate future being the charter members of the Association and the nurses of the Jameson Hospital, everyone of which is a member of the Association.

The membership committee expressed themselves as particularly happy in the fact that those who attended Wednesday's tea represented many types as to age, nationality, and religious denominations, being an evidence that the policy of the Association of working with and for all women and girls of the community is being carried out in New Castle.

BACHELORS TO RULE CITY.

LYNN, Mass., Jan. 3.—The city government which takes office Monday will be composed almost entirely of bachelors. J. Fred Manning who will become mayor is unmarried and has named his sister as his private secretary.

Seven of the 11 councilors also are bachelors. They have selected Timothy A. Curran also unmarried as their president. Every important council committee has an unmarried man as chairman.

Counts Radios In Homes Of Farmers

(International News Service)

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 3.—Twenty-two percent of the farms in Indiana are equipped with radios, according to statistics of the bureau of agricultural economics and the Purdue University agricultural experiment station here.

The figures showed that 37,000 Hoosier farms had radios. The percentage was 34 in the more prosperous farming regions, but the number in barren districts lowered the average to 22 per cent.

Large electric plants supply electricity to 10 per cent and private plants to 4 per cent of the Indiana farms, according to the statistics. There are 149,125 automobiles and 22,626 trucks on Hoosier farms, or 87 per cent for the automobiles and 13 per cent for the trucks.

Denver Digs Up History Of Early Fight For Billiard Endurance Title

By M. F. DACEY
International News Service Staff Correspondent

DENVER, Col., Jan. 3.—There have been champions and champions—flag pole sitters, marathon dancers, etc.—says Edward W. Milligan, authority on western history, but his own favorite champion was the endurance billiard champion, a title that has been open since Denver's infancy when a record of 32 hours to consecutive billiard playing was set.

Not since that day when a Denver banker attired in a frock coat, and a Boulder county mining king in plumed-hat decided the championship, has a billiardist arisen to claim the title, says Milligan.

The story of that first—and last—endurance billiard match, in which the Boulder man was defeated but won $11,000, has long been overlooked by historians, although at the time it was played Denver was at such fever pitch that the storekeepers declared a holiday to watch the contest.

Banker Played.
Charles A. Cook, a leading banker, upheld the honor of the city of Denver. John Quincy Adams Rollins, founder of Rollinsville, Colo., represented Boulder county.

Incidentally, Milligan explains, the story of Rollins' career also has been neglected, because next to the Indians who sold Manhattan island for a few trifling trinkets, Rollins was undoubtedly America's foremost "sucker".

Rollins at one time sold the section that is now the Chicago loop district for $2,400.

The historic billiard game started at 3 p. m. one day in 1866 when Rollins sauntered into Denver's leading billiard parlor, according to accounts uncovered by Milligan, and fell into conversation with Cook, one of the wealthiest men in the region.

"Rollins asserted he could allow Cook 20 points in a hundred point match and beat him," says Milligan in his account. "Cook said he couldn't and offered to play for $400 a game.

Stakes were placed and it was agreed that the two parties were to play until one or the other was exhausted. Then the man who quit first was to forfeit $1,000. That money, too, was posted with a stakeholder.

Game Is Opened.
"The gentlemen started and Cook seemed to be having unusually bad luck. Darkness came on and lamps were lighted as the game continued. The money was steadily cooing from Cook's pocket into that of Rollins."

"The lookers-on watched the game with interest and the lights danced within their figured shades, bringing into clear view the eager countenances of the players.

At midnight Rollins showed signs of fatigue and Cook began to win. So elated was the latter that he proposed to raise the stakes from $400 to $800 a game. Rollins agreed.

"Cook continued to win until an hour before daylight. Then Rollins got his second wind.

On into the second day they played and the city became excited. Business men closed shop to watch the players, their faces haggard from the fearful strain upon their nerves.

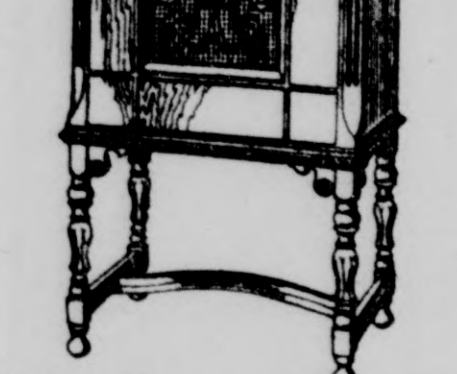

"At 11 p. m. of the second day, 32 hours had gone by. Cook had lost $12,000 but he was plucky. At the end of each game he spotted the balls as if he were sure of winning in the end, but fate was again him.

"Rollins had dragged his weary feet around the table until nature was exhausted. A few minutes after 11 p. m. he threw up his cue, forfeiting $1,000 but winning $11,000.

Both Satisfied.
"The worn-out players shook hands and went to bed. Neither of them ever made any effort to renew the match and it is reasonable to suppose both were satisfied."

Rollins was born in 1816 in New Hampshire, the son of a Baptist preacher. Before he was 19 he was the manager of a wholesale grocery agency in Boston. Restless and venturesome, he went to Chicago.

He borrowed $200 with which to buy land and sold the property now worth millions—for $400. He acquired more land and raised 200 tons of hay on it. Elevated and surface cars now roar across the site. The hay and part of that land he sold for $2,000.

The rest of the land he abandoned and went to Belvidere, Ill. He branched out into the lumber business and in a short time had 500 men working for him. Then in 1860 the gold rush fever took him west and he became one of the foremost empire builders.

He erected stamp mills, organized mining companies, capitalized for millions of dollars, fought Indians, built hotels, built a road from Rollinsville to Hot Sulphur Springs and became one of the leading figures of the west.

Oil City Man Dies From Heart Attack

(International News Service)
OIL CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—While passing through Franklin, enroute to Meadville in an automobile Thursday to consult a physician, Samuel Wilson, 69, of this city, suffered a heart attack and died almost instantly. He was accompanied by Wayne Collins, a nephew, who was driving the car.

Wilson returned here three years ago from British Columbia where for 35 years he was engaged in the lumber business.

Chrysler Dealers In New Quarters

Arrangements are now going forward for the formal opening of The Chambers Motor Co. in its new quarters at 325 Croton avenue, where a fine new building has been erected to suit their needs. Although already installed in the new building, the formal opening to the public will not occur until January 17 and 18.

The new quarters of the company are much more spacious and convenient, giving them more room in which to display the many different models carried by them. It is one of the finest equipped automobile sales headquarters in the district.

GOLD HAIRIED GIRL IS WILLED FORTUNE

(International News Service)
SAWTELLE, Cal., Jan. 3.—Somewhere there is a "girl with golden hair", who is entitled to the $16,000 estate left by James K. Johnson 84 year old Civil war veteran, who died in the soldiers' home here.

Johnson's memory slipped away from him a few days before he died. It was disclosed today. He bequeathed his property to a girl with golden hair. But he couldn't recall her name, although, he said, she was his cousin.

The attorneys handling the estate were seeking the golden-haired cousin.

Evans City Woman Is Severely Burned

Mrs. Charlotte Frishcorn, Aged 84, Reported In Favorable Condition

EVANS CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—The condition of Mrs. Charlotte Frishcorn, aged 84, who was badly burned when her clothing caught fire at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Burket near Evans City, is regarded as "favorable" by attending physicians.

Mrs. Frishcorn was visiting at the home of her daughter. The Burketts were rendering aid and Mrs. Frishcorn was standing with her back to the fire when her clothing became ignited.

Before the fire could be extinguished, Mrs. Frishcorn had received severe burns on the back. Chances for her recovery are considered excellent.

It is generally supposed that Damascus, the chief city of Syria, is the oldest city in the world.

December Shows Great Excess In Precipitation

Summary of weather conditions during December shows that there was a great excess of precipitation during the month, and that the river stage was also greatly above normal as a result.

The mean maximum during the month was 37 degrees, while the mean minimum was 23.8 degrees, the mean average being 30.4 or 5 inches above normal. This was in spite of the extreme cold weather experienced during the early part of the month when the lowest temperature, that of 2 degrees was recorded.

There was not a clear day during the month. There were ten days which were partly cloudy and 21 which were cloudy.

The greatest daily range in temperature was experienced on December 2nd, when the difference between the maximum and minimum was 24 degrees.

Total precipitation during the month was 3.81 inches, the greatest fall in 24 hours being recorded on December 13th, when .79 inches fell. There was 14.8 inches of snowfall, a great increase over the month, but it melted off soon afterwards. There were 21 days on which .01 inches or more of precipitation was recorded. Precipitation was 1.35 inches in excess of the normal.

In 1928, the precipitation was 69 inches below the normal and the mean average temperature was 2.5 degrees above normal.

The maximum temperature of the month was 57 degrees, occurring on December 14, and December 18th. The maximum recorded in 1928 was 55 degrees, while the minimum was 9 degrees.

During December of 1928 the river stage averaged 6.9 feet, while in 1929 the average was 7.3 feet. This is attributed to the thaws which occurred during the month, the temperature in 1928 being more constant, despite the fact that it was 2.5 degrees above normal.

Welsh Male Party To Sing For Radio

Brython Tells Friends To Listen In On January 16; Other Welsh Notes

By W. A. JOHNS BRYTHON
On the sixteenth of this month, it is suggested that the radio fans of the city turn their radio to WLS at 9:30 o'clock in the evening so they can enjoy the wonderful singing of the Welsh Male Party of the City of Chicago. The party will be directed by Dr. Daniel Protheroe, one of the best known musicians of the country.

It is with considerable pleasure that we announce that Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams of Baltimore, have returned to Pittsburgh and that the First Baptist church of that city has engaged him again as soloist on Sundays. Mr. Williams will be remembered as soloist of the First M. E. church of this city for many years. In Pittsburgh he is the manager of a store and doing well.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Powell of Edison avenue, enjoyed a family dinner on Christmas Day, when all their children were at their home. Those present at the dinner were William, Harry and Clarence, Mary, Martha and Dorothy.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Williams of Sheridan avenue, have received a letter from their nephew Bryn Williams, Riverside, California, informing them of the fact that his father, David W. Williams is confined to his home by illness at the present time. The many friends of the latter will regret to learn of this. Mr. Williams made his home on East Reynolds street for many years before going to California. He is still a member of Star of Wales Lodge, True Iovites of America.

News has come to the effect that the veteran Joseph Badger, Los Angeles, Cal., has recovered from his recent serious illness. He is again able to be around, and attend to his many duties.

The writer received a very nice letter this week from Judge Thomas Jones and his wife of Wilkes-Barre. Although both of them were born in this country, yet they can both read, and write in the language of their forefathers.

Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Withrow of Mill street and their family, have returned home after spending a week visiting at the home of the parents of Mrs. Withrow, Mr. and Mrs. Renfrew Harper of Whiting, Indiana.

David J. Owens who is making his home with Mr. and Mrs. John Evans of South Mill street, while his wife and daughter are in Wales, on an extended vacation, has received a letter from them stating that they are in the best of health and enjoying their vacation to the fullest extent.

Westfield Minister To Present New Years Sermons To Members

The first worship service of the New Year will be presented in the Westfield Presbyterian church Sunday at 11:00 a. m. with the minister, Rev. Ross M. Haverfield, in the pulpit. His sermon subject will be, "Keeping the Faith."
Sunday school will convene at 12:15 p. m. in charge of the superintendent, Gue M. Fullerton. The teachers will meet at the manse Saturday evening at 8 p. m., at which time the minister will discuss the Sunday school lesson. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed January 12 at 11 a. m. with preparatory services Friday evening at 8 p. m. when Rev. C. S. Hayner, pastor of Zion Lutheran church, New Middletown, Ohio, will speak, and Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, with Rev. W. A. Lloyd, pastor of Leesburg Presbyterian church, in the pulpit.

DISCUSSES TAXATION

Mount Jackson, Pa.
January 3, 1930.
Editor News:
I was much interested in an article in yesterday's News in the subject of taxation by Arthur Wright. In my humble opinion Mr. Wright is what his name would indicate quite right in the subject of taxation. Next to the question of law enforcement the most important question before the public today is the taxation question. At least it is the most important one for the farmer to take into consideration. At the present time the writer of this article would be classed as a retired farmer but he is still interested in farming and after following that business for fifty years he has been through the mill (so to speak) and knows something about what kind of a proposition the farmers are up against.

It has long been the opinion of the writer that if our public officials from congressmen down to constables would manage the public business as carefully and judiciously as they would manage their own private business affairs that the taxes could be reduced one half and none of our public institutions would suffer and no one would lose anything except the grafters.

Are Others Marked For Death At Hands Of Ellwood Slayer?

ELLWOOD CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—Mystery still surrounds the slaying of Samuel Miller, whose lifeless body was found near the door of the Ellwood City Water company's garage on New Year's night.

Ellwood City, county and state officials have been making a careful investigation of the facts surrounding the case, and are becoming more and more convinced that there is some connection between the murder of Miller and that of Rocco Zapria, who was found shot three or four months ago.

Strengthening this belief is the fact that both men were shot in the same manner. Both were killed by bullets fired into their heads, evidently by an expert marksman. The bullets used in each case were steel jacketed, 32 calibre.

Whether they were fired from a revolver, an automatic, or a rifle is not clear, but it is believed that they were fired from an automatic. They may have been fired either from the same gun, or from similar guns.

Another circumstance in connection with the two murders, adds additional mystery. It was learned today that Miller and Zapria were friends. Just what that friendship amounted to, and whether or not it has any connection with the crimes, is not known.

The motive for the crime is another perplexing question. Was it the same in both cases? Who would there be who would desire the death of these men? It does not appear that the deeds were committed for the purpose of robbery. What then, was the reason.

As in the case with the Zapria murder the Miller murderer appears to have covered up his tracks completely. Authorities have been running down every possible clue. It is realized that there is a desperate and dangerous man or men at large. He may still be in Ellwood City, or he may have made his escape.

Since the indications are that the murders were committed by the same assassin, the question naturally arises as to whether any more Ellwood City residents marked for death? It is a question that is causing no little concern. Up until the time of going to press today, no arrests had been made for the murder. A man was brought in for questioning yesterday, but the authorities satisfied themselves that he knew nothing about the murder, and he was released.

Coroner J. P. Caldwell announces that he will wait a few days before holding an inquest in the hope that by the time the inquest is held, some more definite information as to the identity of Miller's slayer. It is probable that the inquest will be held on next Monday evening, as it is believed that by that time, there may be further developments. In the meantime officers now working on the case will follow every clue that may lead to a possible solution.

Although he is not yet the county detective, Peck Lee has already done some work upon the case. Acting upon some information he received Mr. Lee ran down some clues and is now looking into some additional clues.

Mrs. Herman Wilson Entertains Clubs Here Thursday

Local Matron Entertains Two Clubs At Her Home Thursday On Fountain Avenue

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Herman Wilson of Fountain avenue, entertained the members of the Luncheon Bridge club Thursday afternoon with a 1 o'clock menu at her home. Covers were laid for 12 and Mrs. Kathryn Hainer was a special guest. Pink carnations were used in decoration, and the hostess was assisted in serving a delicious menu by Mrs. Warren Thorpe.

During the afternoon three tables of bridge were in play and score honors were won by Mrs. Thomas Wilson, Mrs. Jud Turner and Mrs. James Gaskell. Next Tuesday, Mrs. Wilson of the Pittsburgh Circle will entertain the club.

Thursday evening, Mrs. Wilson entertained the members of the T. N. T. club at her home. A special guest was Mrs. Warren Thorpe. Three tables of bridge were enjoyed, with Mrs. C. O'Neill and Mrs. Dan McKelvey winning high score honors.

Later delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, concluding a pleasant meeting. In two weeks Mrs. William Bayers of Ewing Park will entertain.

Class 17 Meets At Bickett Home

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 3.—Twenty-five members of class 17 of the Bell Memorial church conducted a monthly meeting last night at the home of Mrs. M. A. Bickett on Orchard avenue.

During the business meeting the members planned for a supper on January 28. Later a social period and lunch were enjoyed and Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Peters and Mrs. Brown comprised the refreshment committee.

Mrs. Earl Yahn Entertains Club

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Earl Yahn of Spring avenue entertained the members of her bridge club Thursday evening.

Special guests were Mrs. D. A. Evans, Mrs. Joseph Moorhead and Mrs. Jack Wilt. At the conclusion of play score honors went to Mrs. J. D. Kirk, Mrs. Wilt and Mrs. Moorhead.

Later delicious refreshments concluded the meeting and the ladies adjourned until January 13 when they will be guests of Mrs. Ferd Zeigler of the Pittsburgh Circle.

Services Today For Murder Victim

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 3.—Services took place this morning at the Italian Catholic church for the late Sam Miller, Water Company foreman, who was shot down Wednesday night on Ninth street, with Rev. Father Marzanna officiating.

The service was a quiet one as the deceased had no near relatives. Burial was made in the St. Agatha cemetery.

CONCLUDE VISIT

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 3.—Miles and Carlton McCandless, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. McCandless of Fourth street, left New Year's morning for Florida by motor to spend the winter months. Upon their return they will visit Washington, D. C., and other interesting points.

Coroner J. P. Caldwell was called and decided that De Carlo had died from heart trouble, following an attack of acute indigestion.

Sudden Death Of Sheep Hill Man

John De Carlo, 46, Father Of Nine Children, Dies After Returning From Work

John De Carlo, aged 46, of Sheep Hill, died suddenly last night soon after he had returned from work at the Johnson Bronze company plant. Mr. De Carlo had apparently been well as usual during the day. When he returned home from work he did not complain, but shortly after entering the house drank a cup of coffee, as was his custom.

He ate a hearty meal and then went into the living room of his home and sat down in a chair. Soon after, Mrs. De Carlo, his wife, went into the room and found him slumped over on the chair. She called her son Ernest, and they lifted him to a lounge. He was gasping and unconscious. A physician was hastily summoned, but Mr. De Carlo died before his arrival.

Mr. De Carlo was born in Italy. He resided in Pittsburgh after coming to this country, but moved to New Castle 22 years ago. He had worked for the Carnegie Steel company, the Johnson Bronze company and other plants in the city. He was known as a hard working, industrious citizen.

Mr. De Carlo is survived by his wife and nine children. The children are Ernest, Peter, Anthony, Mary, Rosie, Tressa, Dominick, Anna and Joseph, all of whom are at home.

Coroner J. P. Caldwell was called and decided that De Carlo had died from heart trouble, following an attack of acute indigestion.

Submarine Cave Is California's Latest Wonder

Canyon Eclipsing Grandeur
Of Grand Canyon Dis-

MOSS LANDING HAS
ROMANTIC HISTORY

By GILBERT GORDON
International News Service Special
Correspondent
MOSS LANDING, Cal., Jan. 3.—
California's book of natural wonders has opened a strange new "under-the-water" page.

It's a submarine Grand Canyon—a great chasm deeper than the vast earth-etch in Colorado, with mighty cliffs that drop to depths of 6,000 feet or more.

You can't see it, but old timers trace it from the shore at Moss Landing, running straight out beyond the pier which once echoed the hum of whaling activity and cargo loadings of great grain crops.

1000 Fathoms Deep
Scientists, too, have established this strange subterranean freak, tracing the undersea canyon beyond the heads of the bay, reporting a depth of 1000 fathoms, or more than a mile in one place. Nearby the lead drops to 12,000 feet, the highest cliffs in the known marine world.

William Sandholt, retired California newspaper publisher and historian of Moss Landing is booming this unseen upheaval of underwater nature as a tourists attraction.

Up the sheer gorge of the submarine canyon races a steady current, always shoreward at a rate of four knots an hour, he said.

And, he adds, strange fish stray from the blackness of immense depths and are swept to shore, and frequently onto the hooks of fishermen, by this swift current.

Romantic History

Founded at the close of the Civil War by Captain Moss, who built the original wharf in 1867, Moss Landing has a romantic history.

Within a decade it was a great grain port, and 20-mule teams plodded from the interior, transporting bumper grain harvests to shipside.
Then, after declining as a grain port, Moss Landing revived during the World War, when it was made a whaling station. Hundreds of great marine mammals were harpooned in the open Pacific and towed to the station for reduction into oils and fertilizer.

Whaling too, has now declined, but Moss Landing will always have its submarine Grand Canyon to bring, perhaps, even greater prosperity in tourist dollars.

Prominent Folks Believed Mixed Up In Dope Ring

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Prominent persons "whose names mean something" may be involved in the federal grand jury's investigation of the three powerful drug rings uncovered through perusal of the late Arnold
Rothstein's papers, it was revealed
Thursday.

Members of the bar are involved in the conspiracy and facts to be presented to the grand jury will surprise and shock the public Assistant United States Attorney John M. Blake asserted.

He gave some intimation of the sensations to come in announcing that he expects 16 more indictments to be returned next week after the grand jury swings into action.

"We expect to show how sinister was the influence of Arnold Rothstein in the drug racket," Blake said.
"The facts will surprise and shock
the public when it learns of them.
The drug rings are big complicated pieces of machinery and some of those involved are very prominent."

Late Stage Star's Ashes Are Hurl'd In Pacific Ocean

(International News Service)
HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 3.—Because Lydia Yeaman's Titus old-time vaudeville singer was born at sea she wanted the sea for her last resting place, so following funeral services
Thursday her ashes were scattered over the Pacific ocean.

While preparations were being made to comply with her wishes her friends were recalling the rays when Mrs. Titus was a belle of the stage and when "Sally of Our Alley" was the popular song of songs.
Friends of Miss Titus said that King Edward VII of England, because of her ability to sing "Sally of Our Alley" as no one else could, presented her with a gold bar pin on which the first notes of the song were inscribed in diamonds.

Warden Jennings Has Resigned His Post At Auburn

(International News Service)
ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Edgar S.
Jennings has resigned as warden at Auburn prison it was learned from sources close to Governor Roosevelt
Thursday.

During the recent riot at Auburn Jennings was held hostage by a group of 15 ringleaders and compelled to send out a note begging the guards to open the prison gates. He was gassed when state troopers hurled bombs at the rioting convicts but finally was saved by the troopers without other injury.

Jennings has served at Auburn warden for the last 12 years.

Prison Revolt Is Thwarted By Man Liked By Convicts

(International News Service)
PUEBLO, Colo., Jan. 3.—An open revolt on the part of 123 convicts at the Broadacre prison farm south of here on New Year's eve in protest against the removal of Earle E. Bennett, farm superintendent, was averted only through the pleading of Bennett it was learned here Thursday.

The discharged superintendent was said to have pleaded with the prisoners and finally exacted their promise not to revolt and cooperate with Reed Kessinger, Bennett's successor, it was said.

Says Coast Guards Are Covering Up

(International News Service)
PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 3.—Attorney General Oscar L. Helzen arrived home from Washington Thursday and issued a statement on the Black Duck killings, which he refused to amplify.

"If the coastguard does not stop trying to cover up I will carry this case to the highest authorities in the country."

Advance Ideas Are Shown For Spring

By ALICE LANCELIER
International News Service Staff

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Contrasting sleeves are one of the advance cranks Dame Fashion is bringing out for late winter and springtime. They add fresh chic to the usual straight and narrow pattern, especially when made of different fabric as well as color.

One house started the ball rolling in a new frock of black crepe mar-cain, with tiny radiating furls from the round neck to the hip-line, where they are released to make the long skirt comfortably full. The following sleeves of white crepe are tucked chevron-shape and a carved crystal necklace and crystal and onyx ring are important details of the costume.

One sleeve of fur and the other of fabric make a curious contrast on a sport coat of heavy brown wool and the idea is likely to be carried over to spring garments. The fur is beaver and runs up around the neck to form a scarf and collar.

All trains will be taken off the road to spring evening gowns, according to advance news from the fashion-makers. Skirts for evening are long, but even all the way round. Women have found trains tiresome to wear and too easily soiled and the men are

THE MODERN TREND

Asia's Workers Organizing On American Lines

Organization Formed Along Lines Of American Federation Of Labor

HOPE TO INCLUDE ALL ASIATIC WORKERS

(International News Service) BOMBAY, Jan. 3.—Taking a leaf from the book of America, working men and women of Asia are today organizing themselves into a vast movement patterned after the American Federation of Labor. The movement has a potential membership of more than 50,000,000.

Behind it has been enrolled the All-India Trade Union Congress, the strongest alliance of workers in populous India.

Authorized representatives of the Japanese labor unions are in this city conferring with Indians upon the agenda and general policy of the new movement which is to be known as the Asiatic Labour Congress. Among those here from Japan is Yone Kube, vice president of the Japanese Seamen's Union who represented that body in the last International Labor Congress which dealt with maritime questions.

Take All Workers. It is the purpose of the new movement to take in all Asiatic workers including China and the lower reaches of Siberia eventually but it has already decided to oppose the policies of the Third International.

A provisional draft of the constitution of the new labor congress is understood to have been agreed upon by the representatives of the Indian and Japanese unions. International News Service is informed that the tentative draft includes:

"The congress shall strive for unity of the working class of Asia by developing closer relations between trades unions in all affiliated countries."

Shun Foreign Domination. "That congress shall strive to remove the exploitation of Asiatic workers under foreign domination, avert war, establish international peace, combat imperialism and capitalism and improve the conditions of life and work in Asiatic countries."

One of the purposes of the congress is to prevent importation of workers and thus to abolish the system under which they have been used to combat each other in labor troubles.

Political leaders of India now on the threshold of a new drive for freedom are watching the new labor development with anxious interest. Jawaharlal Nehru successor to Mahatma M. K. Gandhi as president of the Indian National congress has been active in progressive labor reforms and is intimately identified with the All-India Trade Union Congress.

Munhall Man Is Suicide Victim

Death At Own Hands Follows That Of Daughter Who Succeeded Last March

(International News Service) PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—Suicide today had claimed the second member of the John Jenkins family of Munhall, a suburb.

John Jenkins, 43, killed himself last night by firing a bullet into his head. He had been acting queerly for the past two weeks, according to his family, who said that at that time he had fallen down the stairs in his home, injuring his head.

Victoria Jenkins, 18, a daughter, killed herself last March 14 when, according to the report at that time, her mother refused her permission to leave high school, where she was enrolled as a freshman.

Jenkins had been employed at the Duquesne steel works of the Carnegie Steel Company. He left a note which had not been translated into English, but which is believed to be an explanation of his act.

Lost Donkeys New Worry To Madrid

MADRID, Jan. 3.—New York has the problem of disposing of abandoned automobiles, but in Madrid it's abandoned donkeys. Every once in a while a little donkey is found on the streets, either lost, or abandoned by an owner who could no longer afford to feed the animal.

The difference between an abandoned automobile and an abandoned donkey is that the automobile occupies space, but eats nothing, while the donkey does both. The city of Madrid spends quite a bit of money every time a donkey is found on its hands, and is therefore anxious to get rid of him as soon as possible. Auction sales are announced, but frequently no buyers are immediately found.

STOCKINGS IN YEAR 1 WERE WOVEN OF HAIR

(International News Service) CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Mystery of the year 1, two thousand years ago, under the fashion dictates of the time, wore stockings woven of human hair, according to Dr. Paul S. Martin of the Field Museum, who returned here from the southwestern part of the United States with samples of the legging-stockings.

The persons who wore these strange garments were the so-called "basket makers" and were American Indians in name, but had many habits strangely different from the Indian as history recorded him today.

The hair stockings were excavated from graves recently uncovered. Because of the dry climate, the specimens have been preserved excellently it was announced.

Bomb in Xmas Gift Kills Bride

Shattered home of John Hall, Seat Pleasant, Md., showing deadly havoc wrought by a "Christmas package" left at a neighbor's home for Mrs. Naomi Hall Brady, 18-year-old daughter of the Halls and a bride of five weeks. As the "gift" was opened in the kitchen of the Hall home, it exploded, killing Mrs. Brady and seriously injuring Mrs. Hall and four younger children, two of whom it is feared, may not live. Neither police nor friends are able to cite a single enemy of the Hall family who might be guilty of the fiendish crime, the Halls having been friendly with all their neighbors. (Inset Mrs. Brady.)

Chief Executive Sets New Record

President Hoover with his military and naval aides on the White House veranda at Washington, D. C., following the New Year's Day celebration, during which he and Mrs. Hoover shook hands with 6,348 callers. Between the hours of 10

Appointments Are Made By Council

Mrs. Florence Pearson And Dr. L. W. Wilson Renamed To Zoning Board Of Appeals

When members of council convened today in the City building, several appointments to various offices took place.

Mrs. Florence Pearson was renamed to the board of appeals, zoning law. The term is for three years.

Dr. Loyal W. Wilson, whose term expired in July, but who has continued serving, has been reappointed for four years, effective last July.

Albert Treser was re-elected to the city planning commission for five years and Robert Hainer will succeed J. A. Altschuler, who has left the city.

Councilman Davies had colleagues postpone recreational board appointments, as he said this should be left for the incoming council.

School Bans Play Students Planned

GLENDAL, Cal., Jan. 3.—The hiss of a murderous villain and the pitiful moans of a beautiful heroine were stifled and in place of those melodramatic sounds, the measured tones of boy and girl debaters argued the question: "Resolved, The installment plan is a detriment to Society."

But the Comus club of Glendale Junior college today believed that a triumph was lost to the Thespian Art when the faculty turned thumbs down on "The Worm."

The young actors had made such progress in six weeks of rehearsal that they had sold out the production.

Faculty critics, suddenly becoming aware of the seething excitement, called for a dress rehearsal. Here is one scene they saw and heard:

Barking guns, glinting stiletos, on a darkened stage, girlish screams, the hideous villain bending over pretty Katherine Sonntag, about to thrust a dagger into her slender white throat, and the hero speeding a bullet thru his heart—just in the nick of time.

Dean Charles A. Nelson waved aside the tears and protestations of the Comus clubbers.

"It is not a salacious play," he said, "but it is one of those mystery plays that only experienced and worldly actors should attempt."

"The Worm" was written by W. R. Hopkins and directed by Emerson Cox, Glendale high school teacher.

Davies And Tyler To Participate In Last Council Acts

Will Act In Last Official Capacity At Meeting This Afternoon In City Hall

When council convenes this afternoon at the city building to pore through electric light matters, it will be the last session during which Councilmen Tyler and Davies will transact business during their present term of office.

They will convene Monday when Councilmen-elect Genkinger and Treser are sworn into office.

The state law provides for the new members to be sworn into office the first Monday in January.

Oaths will be administered by Mayor William Gillespie.

It is probable that Councilman-elect Genkinger will assume charge of the department of parks and buildings. Treser will have charge of the streets and Reeves will head the department of fire and health.

$50,000,000 Tied Up In Insurance Cases

(International News Service) PORTLAND, Jan. 3.—Trial courts in Oregon have the discretionary power to decline jurisdiction in suits brought by residents of Germany to recover on life insurance policies written by American companies operating in Germany prior to the World war according to a decision handed down here by presiding Circuit Judge Tucker in overruling a demurrer of Adolph Kahn one of the plaintiffs to the answer of the New York Life Insurance company.

Kahn is one of some 270 German policy holders now seeking to recover $1,500,000 in Multnomah county on American policies subscribed to in Germany. Approximately 50,000,000 is involved in similar cases throughout the country according to C. T. Hass, counsel for the plaintiffs.

Judge Tucker held Oregon courts should not be crowded with cases involving aliens and corporations foreign in trade.

Counsel for the defense contended that German courts alone had jurisdiction and that all premiums and benefits should be paid in German marks as provided in the policies.

Sugar Of Sawdust Is Plan In Sweden

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 3.—The possibility of making sugar out of saw dust, thanks to recent chemical discoveries, arouse great interest in Sweden, where the forests already provide more than half of the country's exports. A Stockholm professor of chemistry, Haakan Sanqvist, has figured out that the annual yield of the Swedish forests amounts to 45,000,000 cubic meters of solid wood, or enough to make a hoop around the globe three feet wide and nearly four feet thick. Of this production about 21,000,000 cubic meters are used for domestic fuel; 18,000,000 are cut up into lumber or reduced to pulp for the paper mills, and 6,000,000 is made into charcoal.

Among the other by-products are such things as artificial silk stockings, sealing wax, moving picture film, varnish, vulcanized fiber, vinegar, tar, wood alcohol, soap, and insulation materials for buildings as well as electric wires. Now the Swedes all expect to get cookies and candy, too, out of their spruce and pine forests.

Argentina Ignored Here, Envoy Finds

(International News Service) NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—After a three months' tour of the United States, Dr. Rodolfo Lenhardson, special envoy of La Epoca of Buenos Aires, official newspaper of the party that at present controls Argentina, finds there is no hostility here toward his native land—Argentina is just ignored.

Remove East Side Tree On Thursday

East side community Christmas tree was removed Thursday afternoon. The tree stood at the corner of East Washington street and Butler avenue. Each Christmas for the past five years the people of that vicinity have had the tree erected and a program has taken place beneath the tree each year. The tree is a thing which has shown the fine community spirit of the people of the east side. Another will be erected next year.

Glasgow Man Seeks Great U. S. Estate

(International News Service) GLASGOW, Jan. 3.—Richard Andrews, 56-year-old Glasgow, laborer, employed by Glasgow Electricity Corporation, claims that he is the heir of one of the most famous copper kings of the United States.

With his brothers, Andrews is attempting to prove his title to property left by John Andrews of Montana, who left $70,000,000 in addition to property and other assets worth another $10,000,000.

John Andrews left Lisburn, County Down, Ireland for America about 80 years ago. He started to make money in Utah by rearing sheep. Later he turned his attention to Montana. The great copper boom was just beginning and it was in this that he made his millions.

Until a short time before he died Andrews wrote regularly to his relatives at home, but it was not until after his death at Butte, Montana, that the existence of his fortune was known on this side.

Since that time correspondence has taken place between the legal representatives of Richard Andrews and the United States with a view to establishing his claim to the fortune. Another of the dead millionaire's alleged nephews lives in Belfast, while two others are in Lisburn.

German Talkies Now Shown By Cheap Machines

By E. G. BOY.
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Simple and popular-priced sound film reproducing apparatus is now being marketed by the Klangfilm and Tobis Companies, only holders of tonefilm patents in Germany to make the talkies popular in Germany.

While all the rest of the civilized world is enjoying the latest sound pictures, notably of American origin, progress of the talkies has been practically halted in Germany by a host of patent suits by the German film companies against the American Western Electric Company. Films like the several years old "Singing Fool" and the "Jazz Singer" which have been a success everywhere are only now shown in Berlin on Klangfilm-Tobis apparatus.

The German film companies invested millions and millions in building the talkie industry up to American standards. The UFA, Germany's biggest film concern, just finished their new sound studios at Neu-Babelsberg near Berlin, which, it is said, are the largest and most modernly equipped in Europe.

To Match America
Until now, however, no all-German talkie has been made to match the best American productions on the world market. On the contrary the films were unconditionally resented by the public when it was found that reproduction on Klang film apparatus was still inadequate.

There is only a very small number of movie theatres, mostly belonging to the big film companies, that are equipped with a complete sound reproducing system, and even these cannot for various reasons reproduce foreign films on German machines. The overwhelming majority of theatres cannot afford the very high prices for sound film installation. Compromising, therefore, between the strong public demand for the latest foreign films and their own technical difficulties, several of the big American talkies, were shown as all-silent films. But also this experiment met with unmistakable disapproval by the public since a talkie loses much of its original value when shown without sound at all.

Forced To Choose
The German film interests, therefore, had to choose between a friendlier attitude towards the foreign patent holders and putting out better and cheaper reproducing machines themselves, in order to keep abreast with the world-wide talkie progress. They decided on the latter way and developed a new reproducing machine. This consists of several units which can be bought separately. A great number of cinema owners will thus be able to equip their theatres with the simplest form of these apparatus, to begin with, and to gradually improve the reproduction by the next better and more expensive units, according to their means.

Hungarian Swindler Suicide In Rumania

(International News Service)
BUCHAREST, Jan. 3.—When his double existence was revealed by the police and detectives were entering his apartment in one of the most fashionable hotels of the city, Charles Von Lengyel, elegant young aristocrat, shot himself with his revolver.

Charles Von Lengyel, son of an impoverished Hungarian nobleman, was known in Budapest and Bucharest society as a "man about town," a luckless spendthrift, who inherited a fortune whenever he seemed to be in need of money.

Every time, however, when he left his friends to visit one of his alleged dying relatives, he was in reality performing one of those high class swindles, which he had lately founded the Rumanian police, frightened the jewellers and amused the world.

One of his latest and best feats was, when he, disguised as a clergyman, went to the richest goldsmith in the Rumanian town, Craiova, and introduced himself as the secretary of the bishop of the next city. He selected expensive churchplates and some gorgeous jewelled ornament for a new church and put them one after the other in his hand bag. Finally he asked for a stole and a mitre for his bishop, and requested the owner of the shop, M. Moldovan, to try it on as his stature resembles closely to that of the bishop. When Moldovan looked exactly like a bishop, he had also a cross in his hand, the unknown reverend seized his bag, ran out of the shop and shouted: "Help, help, Moldovan is gone mad!" Poor Moldovan, attired as a bishop, running after the clergyman, was indeed taken for a madman, was seized by well meaning neighbors and brought to an asylum. The clergyman, of course, disappeared.

Motorists Will Receive License Cards Next Week

Renewal Application Blanks Will Be Placed In Mails Monday, At Harrisburg

HARRISBURG, Jan. 3.—The mails Jan. 6 will carry 2,050,000 operators' renewal cards, sent by the Bureau of Motor Vehicles to men and women operating motor vehicles in Pennsylvania.

These cards must be returned to the Bureau, at Harrisburg, prior to March 1, the beginning of the license year. The fee for a driver's card hereafter is $2, not $1, the 1929 Legislature having doubled the price.

"As has been pointed out in connection with vehicle registration," said Commissioner Benjamin G. Eynon today, "those persons who have changed their address since receiving a card last Spring will not receive a card unless they notify the Motor Vehicles Bureau of the change. These forms are mailed third-class, and even though a forwarding address has been left at the postoffice they cannot be forwarded to the new address, under postal regulations. It is important, therefore, that persons who have moved write Harrisburg for change-of-address form 1122 or M-18. This applies to persons who have mailed change cards since Oct. 16, at which time preparation of renewal cards was completed."

"All renewal forms are released from Harrisburg postoffice at the same time, not alphabetically, as the public seems to think. If the operator does not receive his card within a week he should ask for a duplicate, keeping in mind the change-of-address proposition."

"There is no sound reason why operators' renewal cards cannot be mailed to Harrisburg immediately upon receipt. Two dollars is a trifling sum, compared with the amount of money spent annually by the average owner and driver. The dilatory tactics of owners and operators result in a flood at the close of the period which works hardships on the clerical force, which is entitled to more consideration. Early mailing is an evidence of a desire on the part of the driver to play fair with the men and women working in the Motor Vehicle Bureau."

Soon Play Billiards Taking Air Journeys

(International News Service)
DETROIT, Jan. 3.—When you are making a few hundred mile jaunt via air, and when you become tired of resting peacefully in your chair observing the scenes, you soon will be able to go into the parlor and play a game of billiards with your friend to pass the time away.

For it has been proven successfully that billiards can be maneuvered while an airplane is soaring above the clouds. The test was made here when Ralph Greenleaf, recent winner of the world's championship billiard tournament, took cue in hand, boarded a plane and knocked the ivories about a small table placed in a large passenger plane.

Through the courtesy of the Stout airlines, a party of newspapermen and representatives of the Balk-Calendar Billiard Co. took four short flights in a 12-passenger plane, in which all but the two front seats were removed. Greenleaf gave exhibitions during each flight.

Miss Frances Duncan of Little Beaver underwent an operation for appendicitis in the Jameson Memorial Hospital in New Castle, Saturday morning and is getting along fine, which her many friends are glad to hear.

The annual R. P. Church congregational dinner and meeting was held New Year's Day in the church.

Use Radio To Put Pep Into Tahola Indians

TAHOLA, Wash., Jan. 3.—Strains of music from the radio piercing the quiet and solitude of this Tahola Indian reservation hamlet, miles from civilization, has put pep into the Indians.

It seems that the Indians are very slow about pulling in their nets during the fishing season.

G. P. Halferty, salmon packer, has a fish house. He buys fish from the Indians.

But Halferty couldn't get action out of the redskin fishermen. He found their laziness annoying and costly, entailing much delay.

So he installed a radio.

Now when the strains of "She's My Baby" and "That's My Weakness Now," or some other popular jazz piece go roaring out of the fish house and out on the waters, the Indians leap frantically in their canoes, pull in their nets and catch, and head for the fish house.

Halferty has no trouble getting his fish while he wants 'em as long as the radio tubes hold out.

Man Killed When Struck By Auto

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 3.—Struck by an automobile as he attempted to cross the highway, J. Godfrey Legrand 70, was killed on the North Lima road today. Dr. E. E. King of Columbiana, 15 miles south, drove the car which struck the man, and is under investigation.

Negroes And Japanese Increase In California

(International News Service)
BERKELEY, Cal., Jan. 2.—Negroes, Japanese and Mexicans in California are increasing more rapidly than the population in general according to a booklet of statistics just compiled by associate professor Paul S. Taylor of the University of California department of economics.

Professor Taylor says:

The number of negroes in California rose from 11,045 in 1900 to 21,645 in 1910 and to 38,763 in 1920. The number of Japanese rose from 10,151 to 41,356 to 71,952 in the same period. The population of the state advanced from 1,485,053 in 1900 to 2,377,549 in 1910, and to 3,426,861 in 1920.

Man Killed By Son On Bicycle

WAYNESBORO, Pa., Jan. 3.—Merle Sprenkle, 35, a farmer, residing near here, was dead today as a result of being run down accidentally last night by a bicycle ridden by his son. Junior, 14. He suffered a fractured skull, and died while being taken to a hospital.

The snowball struck him near the eyes, but his injuries were considered minor until Tuesday, when Hartley became unconscious. He was removed to a hospital then, but did not regain consciousness.

SHORT ROMANCES OF EVERYDAY LIFE

Literary Attempts

By Monte Darrell

MIRIAM CRANSHAW had sold her 468th story before she received a letter from a gentle reader. This was probably because they were very short, very inconspicuously published, and not particularly good. Miriam recognized this last fact herself, and once asked a cousin, who had two books bringing in royalties, how she could do better.

After reading a batch of her clipped stories, he shook his head. "I'm afraid you have the fatal gift of fluency and have run your talent into this one mold," he said discouragingly.

But Miriam did not lie awake nights worrying over it. She knew that the receipts from her work while small individually had, in the aggregate, bought many a football suit, saxophone lesson and similar luxuries for her four sons, which Philip's salary could not always cover.

And now she had a letter from a young man who signed himself "Your Admirer," and stated that he was 18 years old, just the age of Philip, Junior. Reading it in the light of her knowledge of youth at that age, she decided to answer it, although she had a poor opinion of anyone who would write the sort of letter he had written to an utter stranger.

"Dear Miss Cranshaw: I read and admired your story in the Daily Star. I am a would-be author myself and so there is a bond between us. If you will write to me, all letters will be considered confidential. I expect to be in your vicinity to see Harvard beat Yale and would be glad to stop off and discuss literature with you. Your admirer, 'GEOFFREY LAWTON.'"

The reply that Mrs. Cranshaw wrote was brief.

"My Dear Mr. Lawton: Thanks for your kind words about my story. As the mother of four grown sons and wife of a Yale man, however, let me give you a bit of advice.

"First, do not suggest the writing of confidential letters between strangers.

"Second, do not risk any money on Harvard's beating Yale. With best wishes for your success.

"Yours truly, 'MIRIAM CRANSHAW.'"

And then, just because she couldn't help it, she amused herself by writing the sort of letter she fancied. To toss it in the waste paper basket.

"My dear Geoffrey—if I may call you so:

"Your letter is most inspiring. I am only 17 and my friends say I am pretty. Blue eyes and light hair. In other words, a blonde. I love my work, but my people are very unsympathetic. Sometimes I yearn for some one to talk to who speaks the same language. I don't think it would be proper for me to receive a call from a perfect stranger, although I shall be at home the morning of the day of the game.

"Yours sincerely,

"MIRIAM CRANSHAW."

As she drew the typed envelope from the machine, the telephone and doorbell rang simultaneously and in answering both, she hastily finished her task and forgot for the time being what she had been doing.

Three days later, she found in the mail a large square envelope whose contents at first puzzled, then appalled her.

"My dear Miriam:

"I can hardly wait until Saturday. To think you are just 17—so near my own age. And I am one of those who prefer blondes, though you might not think so, with my writing to a stranger. But something whispered we were kindred souls.

"Yours until I see you,

"GEOFFREY."

Miriam called herself several names, the least of which was "prize moron." She must have mailed the wrong letter. Well, it was her fault and she'd see the thing through as a punishment. Meanwhile, she pursued her daily tasks, condemning all young men who went about reading other people's stories and making of their admiration an excuse for correspondence.

He came on the morning of what the papers call the Yale-Harvard or Harvard-Yale according to location and classic.

Miriam was sitting by the window darning Philip, Junior's, sweater when she saw a tall young man walk slowly down the street, hesitating as he neared the house. She saw that he wore large tortoiseshell glasses and carried something under his arm, but it was not until she opened the front door and saw that the something under his arm was a large package of manila envelopes, each seemingly filled to bursting, that any doubt as to her course of action assailed her.

Then, as she realized what a serious person this young man was with his dreamy eyes and sensitive mouth, she jumped to a sudden resolve. Poor lad—let him hug his delusion and, at the same time. Heaven forbid, she should have to read all the manuscripts he had so plainly brought with him!

"Is Miss Miriam Cranshaw at home?" queried Geoffrey Lawton, politely.

Miriam smiled regretfully. "So sorry," she said, "but my daughter is not here." Which was true enough at that.

"Could you tell me," he went on earnestly, "how soon you expect her?"

Miriam shrugged her shoulders.

"There you have me. When one goes house hunting with one's fiance, time means so little."

If her caller was non plussed, he gave no sign. Instead, "It is a strange request, but, as a very great favor, would you let me see a picture of her?"

Now if Miriam had actually had a young daughter, it is likely she would have assented. As it was, she was ready to do any little thing to speed the young man's departure.

"Wait a moment," she bade him kindly, and ran upstairs to Philip, Junior's room, where she was reasonably sure of finding portraits he could use among the galaxy of portraits of young ladies clipped from magazines which ran to that sort of thing. Finding one that had no name beneath it and did not too blatantly proclaim its origin, she brought it down and placed it in Geoffrey's outstretched hand.

He regarded it thoughtfully, then glanced up at Miriam. "It has a look of you," he said pleasantly.

"Yes—yes—" her comment was hurried. "So others have said."

"Well, I thank you," said the young man, and turned to go. On the upper step, he paused, gave one wistful look back, then put on his hat and descended to the walk.

When, later in the afternoon, Harvard trimmed Yale properly, Mrs. Cranshaw, Yale rooter though she was, felt a bit of satisfaction. Perhaps it had made up to Mr. Geoffrey Lawton for his morning's disappointment.

But even so much concession she regretted later in the week when a large white envelope arrived with three enclosures. One of them read as follows:

"My dear Mrs. Cranshaw: I had to come and see which one you were. The picture you showed me of a favorite movie actress put me wise. Still your admirer, 'GEOFFREY LAWTON.'"

The two other enclosures were the two letters she had written in answer to his original note. She had mailed them both.

Miriam groaned, laughed, called herself the prize moron! Then sat down and used the whole episode for her 469th story.

Little Willie had heard that radium was going to cure the world of its ills, and entered a chemist's shop. "How much is radium an ounce?" he asked.

"Twelve hundred pounds," answered the chemist.

"Really!" said the boy. "Then give me a nickel's worth of cough lozenges."

"I found something very absorbing on your desk."

Poet (feigning modesty)—"Ha, one of my poems, I presume?"

The Afterglow of Life

By Clyde Weldon

EVERY man involuntarily lifted his hat to the radiance in Sonia Sidell's eyes. Everybody instinctively felt that he knew Sonia, the minute he saw her, whether he had met her or not. The saucy tilt of the diminutive nose, the delicately rounded, though firm, little chin, the "come hither" in the wide gray eyes, never provoked a hint of flirtation, but a comradeship that kept Sonia's little feet dancing and made life worth while for her.

Sonia was the afterglow of the greatness of two sisters. There was Madame Vesta Sidell of grand opera fame, and Lola Elliott Sidell, the novelist, whose books, a little bit daring, bordering on the sensational, gave society much to talk about. Both were married to their careers.

That was why Sonia was married to Wayne Parks. She was tired of being an afterglow, of being pointed out as "the little sister of Lola Sidell—you know, the one who wrote that book," or as "that Sidell's baby sister." She was weary of not being clever herself. So, because she was tired of all this, she was married to Wayne. At least that was what she told him, but, in telling him, she looked up at him with such adoration in the depths of her gray eyes that he didn't believe her. He insisted on thinking that she married him because she loved him.

The two sisters shrugged their famous shoulders and said between themselves, "Oh, well, Sonia might as well get married. It's about all she can do—well."

The Parks were poor. Not the kind of poor that lives in slums and diets on bread and water. They rented a cunning Colonial house in the suburbs with a blue breakfast nook, and a white tiled bathroom. They had plenty to eat and drink. There was enough money to pay the bills, and Wayne's prospects were promising. But in the eyes of Madame Sidell, with her clear, cold, diamond voice, and Lola Sidell, with her monthly rain of royalties, they were poor. However, that is beside the point!

Wayne came upon the cards Sonia was painting one night when he stole upon her softly to surprise her with a bunch of orchids. She was tinting then at her little desk in the living room—splashes of water color, roses that looked almost human, violets whose beauty might evoke tears, and a basket of fruit that would make any mouth water.

"Why, Sonia," he exclaimed over her shoulder, "you're an artist, honey."

Sonia drew in her breath sharply, as though awakened from a dream. "Oh, these," she laughed. "There aren't anything. Just fun. I've done these since I was a little girl."

He tilted her face up toward him. "Do you know," he asked her seriously, "that you could become famous through these?"

She jumped up quickly and slipping a hand through his arm, drew him toward the dining room.

"I'm a lot more famous for my pot roast and my lemon meringue pie," she protested. "If you like the little cards, I'm glad. I'm tinting them for a card concern—just because."

Sonia was irrelevant, like. It was not long before Wayne found out the wherefore of the "just because."

There was a baby. A dimpled, pink and white reproduction of Sonia. Their cup of happiness overflowed. And still Sonia tinted for the card concern. With the baby gurgling and crowing, an interested onlooker, on one arm, Wayne often found her painting the little cards, between spasms of driving a fork into the potatoes, heating the baby's milk, and beating cream for the dessert. She was a marvel, this Sonia. Even the sisters, who came often to see the baby, grudgingly admitted it.

"We didn't think it was in you," remarked Lola, the nearest she ever came to admiration, "but it's silly to just paint those good-for-nothing cards."

Sonia kept her own counsel until one night when Wayne came home very tired from a hard day at the office. There was an air of suppressed secrecy about the house. Wayne felt it. Sonia met him at the door. She hastily divested him of his overcoat. She placed a towel over his eyes.

"I've a surprise for you," she explained, leading him down the hall. He felt his steps guided into the dining room. He tried to remember whose birthday it was, and hoped she didn't have a crowd there for him to entertain.

"One, two, three! See!"

He saw. Reeling against a huge vase of flowers, it stood. A painting of the baby in her little porcelain tub, clad only in her pink and white loveliness, her tiny face radiating smiles, her small, rose-petal hands reaching for the elusive, floating soap. So real it was he might have walked into his own bathroom. The dainty details of embroidery on the towels, everything, easily proclaimed the work to be Sonia's. One could almost smell the fragrance of bath salts.

"Leigh & Sanford, the big plumbing concern, has offered me $5,000 for this," she giggled happily. "Mr. Sanford was here today about the shower you wanted. But I told him he couldn't have it."

"Why, Sonia," he demurred. She leaned her head against his shoulder. His arm went readily about her.

"I didn't want to commercialize your baby!" she told him. "Besides, it's your birthday today. This is your present from baby and me. We are going to frame it for you."

Yes, Sonia was an afterglow. The Lines Drawn For Sugar Battle In Senate Next Week

Important Battle To Be Fought In Congress Next Week Over "Sweets"

SENATOR BORAH HAS AMENDMENT

Americans Consume About 14,000,000 Pounds Of Sugar Annual Survey Shows

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The most important battle over "sweets" ever staged on Capitol Hill loomed on the congressional horizon today as opposing factions in the Senate prepared for the coming tariff war on sugar duties.

The cost of sugar to the American public, which pays an annual bill ranging up to $1,000,000,000 a year, may be fixed for the future by the outcome of the battle over tariff rates. At least, billions of the consumers' dollars will be at stake.

Borah Proposes Amendment
The proposed plan of Senator William E. Borah (R) of Idaho, to offer an amendment to the pending tariff bill fixing a bounty on American sugar, may prolong the warfare. Once before, in President Cleveland's administration, the bounty plan was adopted as a means of protecting American sugar producers, but it was soon repealed. Borah would attempt the experiment again as the cheapest method of protecting American producers while holding down the cost of sugar to the consuming public.

The importance of the problem facing the Senate can be appreciated by the fact that Americans consumed around 14,000,000 pounds of sugar annually. One way or another, both sides agree, the price of sugar will be affected by the tariff duties approved by Congress.

For each penny added to the cost of a pound of sugar the national bill would be increased $14,000,000 a year.

The sugar clash will come within a week or two, following directly on the heels of the now pending woolen schedule. All sides have announced their readiness for the battle. The debate probably will last a week or more and after the Senate has made its decision the House must ratify it before the result goes into the new law.

Farmer May Hunt On Own Property

(International News Service)
MADISON, Wis., Jan. 3.—Landowners in Wisconsin may hunt rabbits and squirrels on their own property throughout the year, regardless of hunting open and closed season, according to a ruling set down by Frank Kuehl, assistant attorney general, to the conservation commission.

This absolute freedom is limited, however, to the owner or occupant of the land or members of their families. Employees living on the land must limit their hunting activities to seasonal restrictions.

Policeman Summons Wagon; Lost On Beat

Walked Clear Out Of Chicago Until His Legs Gave Way

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Patrolman Oscar T. Hansen walked his beat, walked and walked and walked.

It was his first night at the Jefferson Park police station and he was a stranger in them parts. He asked his superior officers what his beat was.

"Walk," said the Lieutenant, "from here to an imaginary line marking the northwest city limits."

"Here I go," said Patrolman Hansen and he did so.

He walked and he walked and he walked.

Eventually he came to a spot in the prairie which was marked by a police call box. He lifted the receiver and spoke to his commanding officer.

"Well here I am," he said.

"Splendid," replied the C. O. "Now come back."

"All right," said Patrolman Hansen, "but how do I go about same? I'm lost."

"Take Camfield road to Higgins road," said the voice, "turn left and keep on until you get here."

Patrolman Hansen took Camfield road to Higgins road. Arriving at the intersection he failed to recall which way he should turn so he turned right which was wrong.

He walked and walked. Hours passed but Patrolman Hansen drove weary limbs forward. A patrolman must not admit fatigue when duty calls. Finally he came to a filling station that had a telephone. He gave his police station number.

"Fifteen cents please," said the operator.

"No such thing," said Patrolman Hansen. "Local calls are a nickel."

"Certainly sir," said the patient operator, "but the number you asked for is in Chicago."

"Of course it's in Chicago bellowed Patrolman Hansen. "Where do you think I am—in Des Plaines?"

"Yes sir, Des Plaines," said the operator.

"Now isn't that ridiculous," muttered Patrolman Hansen who had walked clear into another town.

The kind police station sent the patrol wagon to get him for Patrolman Hansen by this time was extremely weary.

Old Adage Discarded For Modern Children

(International News Service)
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 3.—The old adage that children should be seen and not heard has just been detrimental to the character of children and should be discarded according to Dr. Ada E. Schweitzer, director of the child hygiene division of the Indiana board of health.

"We sympathize with the victim of the seen and not heard policy of the gay nineties when parents monopolized the limelight, permitting the children to lurk silently within the shadow of the great adult."

"There might have been dozens of things he wanted to do and thousands of questions which should have been answered before he forgot what they were, but they were sh-sh-sh out of existence until finally the docile child unconsciously suppressed the tendency to think for himself or to initiate some original activity."

Mellon Defends Coast Guardsmen

Secretary Mellon Says You Cannot Break Up Smuggling Without Using Force

DRUNKEN BRAWL IS INVESTIGATED

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—"You cannot break up liquor smuggling without the use of force."

This statement was made today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in explanation of the "Black Duck" killings off New London, Conn., by U. S. coast guardsmen, and the killings aroused so much furore that a mob yesterday tore down coast guard recruiting signs on historic Boston Common.

"The coast guard apparently was operating within its instructions," said Mellon, "but an independent investigation has been ordered into all the circumstances."

Were Enforcing Law.
Mellon also revealed that advance information had reached the prohibition authorities that efforts were to be made to land liquor at the point where the "Black Duck" was heading for on the night in question, and that this accounted for the presence of the coast guard forces there.

The investigation is in charge of Deputy Collector of Customs T. P. Finnegan of Boston, assisted by Special Agents Joseph P. McKenna of Washington and Inspector George M. Murphy of Providence, Mellon said.

Another investigation is being directed into the drunken brawl staged by some members of the coast guard after the killings, on the liquor that was confiscated.

Coast guard officials have informed Mellon that the men were "new in the service" and that they will be court-martialed.

No Information Received.
"No information so far has been received which does not entirely justify the efforts of the coast guard to prevent the Black Duck from reaching the shore," Mellon said.

"Instructions have been issued by the treasury against promiscuous shooting. However, the coast guard, under the law, is authorized to use force to capture violators of the law and if, in pursuance of that obligation, it cannot shoot when necessary, it cannot carry out its duty."

In the recent shooting the crew of the boat gave the proper warning and gave pursuit to the vessel which was attempting to escape. It was necessary to use force. On the boat was captured a large quantity of illicit liquor.

"The coast guard had been instructed to prevent smuggling and to use force when absolutely necessary. It is the coast guard's duty to capture boats which are attempting to smuggle liquor and smuggling cannot be broken up without the use of force."

"The department had information that liquor was coming in and concentrated a coast guard to prevent it. The boat, which sought to escape was pretty well in."

"Entirely justified," Mellon referred to the shooting as "unfortunate" but felt it was "entirely justified."

Discussing the general prohibition situation, Mellon said he had been informed by prohibition officials that the regulation of industrial alcohol is "well under control." This is in direct contradiction with the claims of Senator Borah and others that alcohol diversion constitutes one of the principal problems of enforcement.

Illicit distilling of liquor and smuggling from Canada and other foreign countries constitute the principal enforcement problem, according to Mellon. He said it was because of smuggling that the coast guard drive had been organized.

In commenting on the transfer of prohibition enforcement to the justice department, Mellon approved the idea of leaving the function of issuance of alcohol permits in the treasury. However, he explained that the department of justice also would have a responsibility in permit issuance by making investigations to determine whether applicants were eligible to receive these privileges.

Mellon declared the present personnel of the prohibition bureau was doing everything within its power to enforce the law."

Peasant Unrest In Russia Is Growing

(International News Service)
MOSCOW, Jan. 3.—"We have condemned the kulaks (upperclass peasants) to death!" This sensational statement appeared in the "Deutsche Zentral Zeitung," the official organ of the German speaking section of the Communist party of Russia.

Official tax records place the number of kulak farms in the union at 750,000. The statement, which appeared in an article on peasant unrest especially in German-speaking districts, means that 3,500,000 human beings will be starved to death by taxation and confiscatory grain levies unless they sell out everything and join the cooperative farms.

The newspaper further says that the socialization of agriculture is imperative, and that since peasants refuse to abandon private farming voluntarily, the process must be effected by force.

The grain levy policy against all classes of peasants aroused most opposition from Nikolai Bukharin and the so-called "rightists." Premier Alexey Rykov openly called it the "military feudal exploitation" of the peasantry and narrowly escaped ousting from the Politburo, the committee of nine which frames the political policies of the government and Communist party.

The grain levy has been successful in filling elevators with more than sufficient grain to feed urban populations for a year. In addition the "untouchable" grain reserve of 1,500,000 tons, which was consumed last year to prevent importation of grain, has been restored.

Ohio Farmer, Courier For Gen. Custer, Gives New Light Of Leader's Death

By RALPH G. PLATT
International News Service Staff Correspondent

GENEVA, O., Jan. 4.—A touching and enlightening tale of here-to-fore mysterious circumstances regarding the heroic death of General George A. Custer, killed in the massacre of the Little Big Horn during the Civil War, was recently divulged by Philip Wanger, 84, Indian fighter and courier, now a farmer living near here.

Because the message Wanger had been entrusted to deliver to Custer arrived too late to be read by the famous leader, the aged courier never care to discuss his perilous ride through Indian country and the spectacle that dimmed his then youthful eyes at the termination of the ride.

Custer Surrendered
Born in Belgium in 1845, Wanger was an infantryman assigned to Company K of the Second United States Infantry. His five years service was spent for the most part in the saddle. He was bugler and orderly to Capt. Sam McKeever of the Second.

On June 25, 1876, Custer was hard pressed. His supporting columns had failed him. A number of couriers were sent out for aid, but history records that only one other man besides Wanger, a member of a cavalry outfit, was able to break through the Indian lines.

When Wanger has completed his long ride from Powder Creek Valley to the place where Custer had fallen with his regiment in the rocky territory of Little Big Horn, he found Custer on the ground, face down. A pile of shells from his rifle and a brace of pistols were beside him.

Custer, the hero of the Civil War and innumerable Indian fights had been dead for more than an hour. He had been shot more than twenty times. Nearly all of the soldiers about him had been scalped by the savages.

Custer Not Scalped
Wanger related that he learned later from friendly Indians that even among the ranks of the savages Custer had been respected and that "he was too big a chief" to suffer such indignity.

Wanger declares he never learned the contents of the message he was to deliver to Custer. He returned it to his commander after he had helped to bury the dead general and his ill-fated followers. In the future that followed Wanger said the message was lost at general headquarters.

Wanger readily admitted he did not join the army in 1875 to be an Indian fighter, nor was a career of thrills his purpose in enlisting. He declared he joined the infantry, because jobs in Cleveland were so scarce he could not earn enough to eat. The army post paid him $13 a month. Of that he saved $10 each month and sent it to his mother.

Biography Of Briand Starts Paris Lawsuits

By ROBERT W. THOMPSON, International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Foreign Minister Aristide Briand is famed as a crusader for world peace but there is one battle he can not stop and it is being waged, so to speak, over his life body. In fact the fight is for and against "The Life of Aristide Briand." Strangely enough, whether he "lives" or is "killed," M. Briand is the least concerned of all persons.

M. Raymond Hesse, attorney, is for it. He alleges that he was ordered to write a biography of the famous statesman and that he delivered "The Life of Aristide Briand" to the publishing firm of Bernard Grasset.

The publisher avers that he personally did not order the work, that while he was on a vacation his assistants purchased too many manuscripts, and that it would be unattractive to print the life of a living statesman.

M. Hesse objects that he spent considerable time and money going to Saint Mazaire where M. Briand started up the political ladder and further more documenting himself on the varied career of the man who formed thirteen ministries and still in another one.

Paris courts must decide if the author is entitled to $4,000 damages and if "The Life of Aristide Briand," as M. Hesse sees it, will live.

Mud-slinging is becoming too popular, according to the Prefect of Police Chippie.

Chauffeurs are wont to drive through puddles, the wheels of their cars sending up a shower of mud and water that falls upon the helpless pedestrians.

Two years ago the Prefect put through an ordinance forbidding "mud-slinging" but so many complaints have reached the police from bespattered Parisians that it has been decided to fine careless chauffeurs on the spot.

In the case of a flagrant violation the chauffeur may be asked to accompany his victim to the nearest dry cleaning establishment and foot the bill.

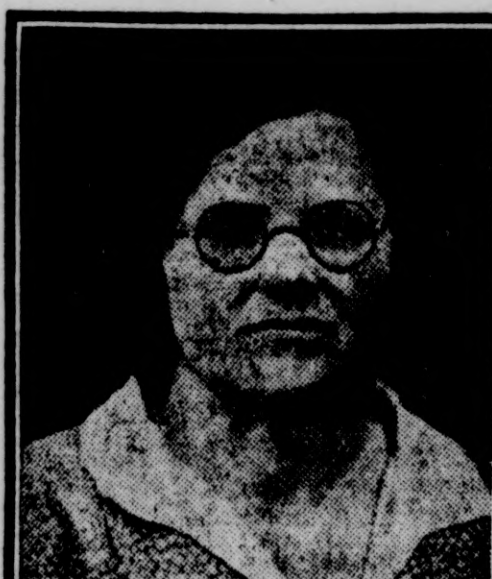

Fencing, which used to be one of the foremost forms of physical exercise and recreation in France and particularly in Paris, has lost much ground in late years and its professors are complaining loudly because of its neglect in favor of other more vigorous sports and pastimes. Students in the high schools and colleges are much less disposed to practice with the foils than a few years ago and are spending their leisure time on the football fields or tennis courts. With the old-time duel practically forbidden by law and fast becoming a thing of the past, the young French bloods find little incentive for taking up this exercise. There are, however, a number of good fencing schools still to be found in the capital.

The new-fangled auto hearses which a progressive Municipal Council introduced here some time ago, has not met with the approval of everyone.

M. Emile Massard, one of the councillors, has made himself the spokesman for those who think that less speed and more dignity best befits a funeral, regardless of traffic requirements.

The chief complaint against the hearses is that they travel too fast. The mourners, in taxis or otherwise, sometimes lose track of them.

The traffic congestion being such that speed is necessary even for the funeral processions, the Municipal Council is not expected to act favorably on M. Massard's request to place a speed limit on the auto hearses.

AFTER OPERATIONS

"I was three times under an operation and I was very weak and nervous and could not eat. I suffered for ten years. I learned about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my husband bought me a bottle. I felt a little better and he bought me two more. I had the Compound in my home for two years and took it all the time. Now I feel strong and can do anything."—Mrs. A. Michalk, 5443 Mitchell Ave., Detroit, Michigan.

Cosmetic Sale Hits Record In Germany

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The production of cosmetics in Germany is four times greater than before the World War, according to a report from C. B. Hurst, American Consul General in Berlin.

Virtually all prominent French manufacturers are marketing their products in Germany on a fairly large scale. Several American and British cosmetic preparations are also offered for sale.

Evening gloves may match the slippers in a bright color, and black for such costumes is particularly favored.

"Navy Wants Peace" Secretary Asserts In Boston Speech

Secretary Of Navy Charles Adams Speaks To Boston Business Men

(International News Service)

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—Assurance that the "navy wants peace" was given by Secretary of Navy Charles Francis Adams to business men of Boston at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday afternoon.

He said that the navy welcomed the end of competitive battleship building but added that overseas commerce always needs navy protection.

Discussing the present controversy as to whether the battleship is doomed in warfare because of the advent of airplanes and submarine attacks, Secretary Adams said that the battleship would rove the seas for a long, long time. Bombing planes, he said, because of anti-aircraft guns on battleships, will have to work two miles up and he added that a bomb tossed from that distance was not effective.

Prehistoric Commerce Proved In California

(International News Service)

CARPINTERIA, Cal., Jan. 3.—A new proof of prehistoric commerce has been laid before California archaeologists.

Nothing else, they said, would explain the discovery in a thousand year old Indian burial mound of a large bead of pipe-stone, a mineral substance found only in the upper Mississippi Valley.

The finding of the hand-shaped piece of catlinite or pipe-stone, according to David B. Rogers, curator of the Santa Barbara museum of natural history, takes position with the discoveries in the Ohio valley pre-Indian mounds.

Excavations there brought to light sea shells, some carved, that grow only in the sub-tropical waters off the lower California coast.

There were also metallic ornaments that probably were transported by obscure Indian commercial trail from the Aztec lands of Mexico to Ohio valley tribes.

Scores of skeletons and many stone implements were unearthed by road builders near here.

The pipestone fragment was the second that had been discovered in California, Rogers said. Pipestone is an indurate red clay, named for its first white discoverer, Catlin many years ago. It is found naturally only in Minnesota.

"Jobless" Man Would Like To Have Wife

$15 In Bank 110 Years Now Worth $2,773.86

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—A statement of condition of the oldest savings account in the United States, one that has grown in 110 years from $15 to $2,773.86, was made recently by the Bank for Savings in the city of New York. Just 110 years ago John S. Thorpe opened an account with the bank, then the only bank in the state, with a deposit of $10. On August 26 of the following year he added $5, making the principal $15.

No withdrawals have been made from the account and Thorpe's heirs own it, the executor having the passbook. A total of $2,758.85 has been added as interest.

Sweden Plans To Subsidize Stork

(International News Service)

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 3.—Subsidizing the stork to the extent of at least one million dollars annually is a proposal just delivered to the Swedish Social Service Department by a committee of experts, appointed by the Riksdag, or national legislature.

Part of this money would be paid to poor mothers as recompense for loss of wages in connection with child birth and part as help in defraying the lying-in expenses. A government bill to this effect is expected at the next session of the legislature which begins in January.

In an exhaustive report the experts, including Miss Kerstin Hesselgren, a member herself of the Riksdag, and a woman physician, Dr. Ada Nilsson, as well as two men, propose, first, that medical advice should be furnished expectant mothers by authorized doctors or midwives and that half of the fees for these consultations should be paid by the state and other half by the mothers themselves; second, that more lying-in hospitals be provided at public expense; and, third, that more nurses and "mothers' helpers" be made available—and, finally, that to mothers with small incomes, certain amounts be paid in cash, or which two-thirds should be payable at the time of the birth and one-third three weeks later.

The experts figure that at least 70,000 mothers should thus be aided with money and that about 1,500 wage earners be recompensed, in addition, for loss of time in connection with child-bearing.

Foreigners Find More Favor As Film Directors

By FREDERIC A. CHASE,
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 3.—The foreign director appears to be in more solid than ever with picture producers. Doubts were held at the time of the introduction of talking pictures as to whether the foreign megaphone wielders would be able to maintain their popularity in sound work with their comparatively scanty knowledge of English enunciation.

But all of the best known foreign directors in the film colony are up to their ears in work and the demand for their services is greater than ever.

Ernst Lubitsch, the most famous of them, has just completed a musical romance "The Love Parade" with Maurice Chevalier in the leading role which critics declare one of the German director's best films.

Josef Von Sternberg has found a boon in "Underworld" where he directed George Bancroft. Von Sternberg achieved great recognition. Lother Mendes, Alexander Korda, the late Paul Leni, Ludwig Berger, Paul Stein and Paul Fejos, are other imported directors who are busy as can be with new work awaiting them.

Gerald Gage, mail carrier made an idol of Lindbergh from the time he saw the then unknown flyer prepare his Spirit of St. Louis at San Diego for his momentous hop to Paris.

Gage was in custody under federal charges for using the mails to defraud Lindbergh's publishers by offering a book "We Fly" under the alleged stolen name of the Colonel's aide, Donald E. Kehoe.

"I guess my desire to write Lindy was just hero worship," Gage said.

"I write to his aunt for information and bought pictures from studios. Then I wrote my impressions in a book called 'Plucky Lindy'."

"The book sold well but I spent too much money on advertising it."

"I started the second book, 'We Fly' but realized that the publishers would pay no attention if they knew I was a letter carrier in Los Angeles. I got the idea of using Kehoe's name."

but didn't think it would be against the law."

Gage told how the publishers, a Philadelphia firm had obtained an offer of $6,000 for the series from a national weekly.

"I wrote the first installment, notifying the publishers to get in touch with Lindbergh's attorneys. The attorneys refused me permission and the whole affair blew up. 'I guess I should have stuck to delivering mail.'"

Coliseum At Capital To Honor Roosevelt

By ALFRED T. NEWBERRY,
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A costly coliseum to beautify the background of the Capitol. It will be on a direct line with the Capitol, the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial with its Lake to Mirrors. It will be this Nation's tribute to one of its former presidents—Theodore Roosevelt.

The project is sponsored and already placed into motion by the Board of Trade, assisted by the Allied Architects of Washington. Location of the memorial in the eastern section of the city has been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. The proposed site is at the junction of East Capitol street and Anacostia river. It would serve as a handsome eastern gateway to the city.

Sometime ago the Board suggested to the Roosevelt Memorial Foundation that it erect a coliseum in the nation's capital in which major national events and athletics contests could be held. Such programs would typify the spirit of the famed orator, the Board said.

The foundation is continuing its campaign for subscriptions. Amounts are being received from all parts of the country ranging from a mere dollar to several thousands. It hopes to collect a few million, enough to erect a splendid memorial to perpetuate the memory of the one-time president and Rough Rider.

It was estimated that seventy-five acres of ground will be required. The proposed coliseum would seat 100,000 persons with probable facilities for the erection of temporary seats to accommodate several thousand more. No doubt it would be the scene of some of the seasons major sporting events.

Several airplanes have been struck by lightning while in flights.

Matthew --- The Gospel Of Kingship

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

"Thou shalt call his name JESUS: for he shall save his people from their sins."—Matthew 1:21.

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

Inasmuch as the Sunday school lessons for the next six months are confined to the gospel of Matthew, this week's space may be used by giving a "bird's-eye view" of the book we are to study.

Our Bibles do not contain "four gospels," for there is but one gospel of Jesus Christ, and that gospel, or good story, is related by four different evangelists. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, all writing to different nationalities to portray Jesus Christ from four different standpoints. Matthew, a former tax collector, wrote to the Jews to prove that Jesus Christ was their King and Messiah, in whose life and death the Old Testament prophecies and ritual were fulfilled. His characteristic expression, therefore, is: "That it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the word by the prophet, saying," Matthew gives us 60 quotations from the Old Testament. It is, therefore, logical that Matthew though not written first, should stand first among the 27 books of the New Testament. Its opening verse is a door which swings backward into the Old Testament as well as forward into the New Testament: "The Book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham."

Plan and Outline

When Matthew left the customs house he brought with him more than his pen and ink. He brought the ability to classify and corify parables, miracles, sayings and teachings, through which runs a common thought, for his biography of Christ is written topically rather than chronologically. In developing his great theme of the Kingship of Jesus, he first writes of the Preparation of the King (1:1-4:16), then of the Preaching of the King (4:17-16:20), then of the Passion of the King (16:21-27) and finally of the Power of the King (28).

Frank Hoagland and family, Wm. Cox and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hope visited at the home of Clyde Hoagland of New Wilmington on Friday.

Mrs. Howard Pyle and family spent Christmas at the home of Walter Pyle of Youngstown.

Mr. and Mrs. John Garrett, were guests at the home of William Garrett of New Wilmington on Wednesday.

W. I. Black returned home after spending a week visiting at the home of his brother, John Black of New Castle.

Mrs. Lee Klingensmith returned to her home at Sharpsville on Wednesday after visiting for a week at the home of Mr. Theodore Speer.

Mrs. Jessie Osborne and son Harold visited at the home of Clifford Osborne of Greenville on Sunday.

Plan To Broadcast Pictures Dropped

(International News Service)

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The general broadcasting of radio pictures initiated by the German governmental broadcasting stations has been abandoned because it didn't pay. Only 16 persons in all Germany had subscribed to the picture service. The system itself, however, worked perfectly, and the broadcasting of pictures will be retained to send weather maps to airplanes and to broadcast pictures of fugitive criminals to all police authorities.

Elbow length sleeves are featured for the first time in years in resort wear now being shown.

Johnstown Man Placed In Jail With Cauffiel

Jonathon Rager, Who Was Convicted Along With Mayor Cauffiel, Gets One To Two Years

(International News Service)
EBENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 3.—Former Mayor Joseph Cauffiel, of Johnstown, had been joined in the county jail here today by Jonathon Rager, of Johnstown, following the sentence meted out to Rager, who was indicted with the ex-mayor on joint charges of conspiracy and keeping a gambling house.

Rager who pleaded guilty to the charges last March, was sentenced yesterday to pay $500 fine and serve from one to two years in the county jail. The court showed leniency, it was explained because of the aid he gave in the prosecution of Cauf-fiel.

The deposed mayor is fighting the court order which removed him from office in spite of his refusal to resign. He will appeal to the higher courts. It was stated, however, that the fight as far as necessary to vindicate himself. He claims that he has been made a victim of a political plot and of gamblers whose places of business he has closed.

Reporter Figures 284 Feet Of Spaghetti Make Pound

Many have asked the question,
"How much spaghetti does it take for a meal?" Because of the ingenuity and curiosity of this reporter, this question is answered in the way of inches.
The writer traveled to a store and purchased two pounds of the Italian favorite food. Upon counting the strips of macaroni he discovered that there were exactly 85 strips to the pound. Measuring the thin and round obstacles the writer discovered that 3400 inches or 284 feet equal one pound of the famous Italian product.

Two pounds of spaghetti equal 170 strips, or 567 feet. So when you get down to eat supper and find that you have spaghetti through these figures you will be able to find out just how much of the Italian product you are eating.

The Story Of The Panama Canal
Part 23—Controversy With England—Slides

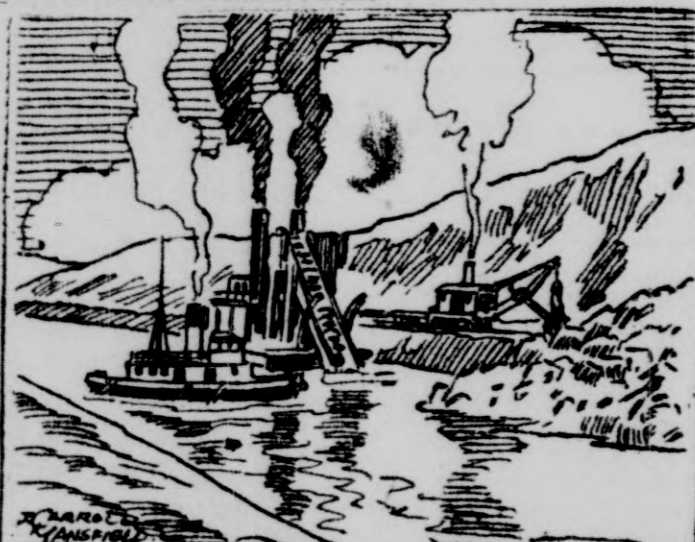

IN 1912, BEFORE THE PANAMA CANAL WAS COMPLETED, CONGRESS PASSED AN ACT GRANTING AMERICAN COASTWISE VESSELS THE PRIVILEGE OF USING THE CANAL FREE OF CHARGE. ENGLAND PROTESTED, CLAIMING THAT THIS VIOLATED THE HAY-PAUNCEFOTE TREATY OF 1901, WHICH SAID THAT SHIPS OF ALL NATIONS SHOULD BE TREATED ALIKE.

PRESIDENT WILSON CAME TO BELIEVE THAT THE BRITISH CLAIM WAS JUST, AND ASKED CONGRESS TO REPEAL THE ACT. AFTER A LONG AND BITTER DEBATE THE LAW WAS REPEALED IN 1914, AND AMERICAN VESSELS USING THE CANAL WERE REQUIRED TO PAY TOLLS.

THE WORST TROUBLE WITH THE CANAL HAS COME FROM DESTRUCTIVE LANDSLIDES. CULERA CUT IS MENACED BY THIS DANGER, WHICH UP TO JULY, 1919, HAD CLOSED THE CANAL TO NAVIGATION FOR A TOTAL OF 242 DAYS AND COST $10,000,000 TO REPAIR THE DAMAGE.

THE BANKS LIABLE TO SLIDES ARE GRADUALLY BEING CUT DOWN. SAFETY BASINS HAVE BEEN DUG TO CATCH THE DEBRIS, AND IN THE COURSE OF TIME THE DANGERS OF SLIDES WILL HAVE BEEN ELIMINATED. THE SLIDES USUALLY OCCUR DURING THE DRY SEASON.

NEW CASTLE PLAYS MARS HIGH TONIGHT

First W. P. I. A. L. Game For Schoolboy Teams

Local Cagers After Third Victory Of Present Season At Mars High

Red And Black Quintet In 'Tip-Top' Shape; Leave This Afternoon

(By CHARLES LANDOLF) New Castle high school basketball team leaves this afternoon at 5:15 by automobile in search of the third floor contest of the year, when they play Mars High in the first W. P. I. A. L. contest in Section Three tonight. Coach Bridenbaugh sent his "basque" through a series of workouts during the last week and following the final workout yesterday afternoon at Senior High gym stated that his cagers are in "tip-top" shape for the contest tonight. He feels that Mars will be the third team to fall victims to the local string of victories.

Mars Report Good Team To date the locals have won two games. Both wins came at the expense of Wilkesburg High. The game with Mars tonight is different in every way from the games with the Pittsburgh school. Mars is putting out a team this year that will give plenty of opposition to the other W. P. I. A. L. "conquest seekers," reports state.

Practices during the last two weeks of the local Red and Black quintet show that the new defense that Coach Bridenbaugh has developed is functioning better and by the time the locals play here on January 10, fans will see a smooth running team on the floor with a defense that is going to worry many high school teams.

Probable Lineup When the whistle blows tonight for the start of the game at 8:00 o'clock these five boys will probably make up the team for New Castle; Wamio and Hannon at the center forward positions, Alexander at the center post and McAuley at the guard assignments. On reserve will be Rowe, McIntosh, Winter, McKissick, and Thomas.

Following are the names of those who will leave for Mars this afternoon; Francis Wamio, Ralph "Red" McAuley, Arthur Alexander, Russell Hannon, George Winter, Dick Thomas, Nick Uram, Allen McKissick, Luther Rowe, Monte McIntosh, Faculty Manager Ralph H. Gardner, Head Coach Phil H. Bridenbaugh, Assistant coaches, William L. Klee, and "Gig" Thomas. Student manager William Long, and Charles Landolf, of The News.

Kandy Kids Win From Buccaneers

The Wampum Kandy Kids won their 10th game of the 1929-1930 season by taking over the New Castle Buccaneers by the score of 28 to 20 in a very fast and interesting game played on the Wampum Opera House floor. The Buccaneers threw a scare into the Wampum team late in the second quarter when they forged ahead by two points, but the Kids rallied and were leading at half time by a 16 to 14 score. The Kids had things their own way in the last half of the game and all substitutes were injected.

The Wampum team was in an accident on their way to play the Harding High Reserves at Alliquippa when their car turned over and the Wampum team was considerably used up. When the players arrived at Alliquippa a first aid had to be rendered and one or two of the players played the game with their hands bandaged up. The Kandy Kids lost this game 23 to 16 but all Alliquippa fans are eager for a return game as the Wampum team was considerably handicapped.

"The Kandy Kids on Friday night will take on the fast Meyer China team from the Beaver Valley Industrial league.

Giants-White Sox Will Barnstorm

(International News Service) NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—These old companions of the road, the New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox, are to team up again in a barnstorming tour, according to the Giants' spring schedule announced today.

The two old friends are to meet in sixteen games, nine in Texas, four in Indiana, one in Ohio and two in Chicago.

In addition to the games with the Sox, the Giants schedule calls for two tiffs with the Indians, three with minor league teams and two with college outfits.

The first squad of Giants is to report at San Antonio February 15 and the second squad March 1.

The estimated sales of wayside refreshment and supply stands, exclusive of gasoline and oil, was $244,000,000 in 1928, according to the U. S. bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

This Carnera Fellow Is Plenty Huge And Looks Like Fighter

Mammoth Italian Fighter Makes Bow At Sillman's Gym In New York City

Is Slow, But Does Not Lack Courage And Is Horrible To Look Upon

By DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—A tremendous lumox of a man, with the guileless eye of a milch cow and the body of an inter-city moving van, approached with great, ungainly strides, for all the world like an old time "sawdust" man, on stilts, and was introduced from the ring at Sillman's gymnasium yesterday. They said he was Prima Carnera, the Italian giant, this precaution being taken to prevent unnecessary confusion. It was no use letting somebody go away with the impression that he had just seen Johnny Coulton.

There was a patting of applause in the wake of the announcement and the lumox bowed stiffly from the waist, grinning like a banshee. He has too many guns for real beauty and they show redly, horribly. They made one think of the slaving mouth of an animal.

Is Plenty Fierce Not a nice man to look upon, this Carnera. That grin of his was supposed to be reassuring. Instead, it gave one the impression that sav-agery lurked beneath the stolid, bovine surface. Those who know far more of him than the writer could guess in his brief acquaintance say that Carnera has plenty of what they call "geezer" in him, meaning that he is not above cowardice.

If this is true, the savage beneath might be all the more dangerous to anyone he had at a disadvantage. There is no one so cruel as the man of doubtful courage who finds himself able to give punishment without fear of reprisal. However, I can't attack a man's courage because I didn't like his crown and bridge work.

Appears Quite Slow I can't even guess whether he is a good fighter or not. He is slow, but not particularly so for one so huge. He didn't lumber clownishly. Neither did he cavort, he used a straight left and a left hook with some effect, yet it must be remembered that he was hitting Romero, the well known human being. Romero was born to be hit and destiny hasn't cheated him.

He made a perfect foil for Carnera, for he is slower than the first of the month and his heels are so concave that he goes over even when you miss him. Force of habit, probably. Anyhow, Carnera hit him with a right yesterday and he promptly forehooked the perpendicular. I don't like Carnera's right, except when he shoots it to the body. He chops with it too much when he punches to the head.

Weights 287 Pounds The giant gave a good show yesterday and was in high, good humor, smirking at the crowd and airing a few quips, the points of which was lost on everybody, owing to his inadequate English, but did the show prove anything? I fear not. Every one, for instance, knows that a man who stands 6 feet 10 1/2 inches, weighs 287 pounds, and has the leverage of 20-inch feet behind his punch can hurt anything he hits. Can he hit anything? I'm afraid a chump like Romero Rojas can furnish no evidence on the question.

On the opposite side of the question, we still are in the dark. Carnera never has been hit by a real hitter, with all deference to Young Stribling. These giants usually are surprisingly vulnerable on the jaw or in the body or both and they are so slow that they have to be tougher than the average to get by. However, I'll say this for him: He carries his weight well. He may be bulky; but he neither is fat nor muscled like a piano mover.

Perhaps it might be just as well to await his American debut, tentatively set for January 15 "somewhere out of town" or for his Garden premiere on January 24. To know a man intimately, there is nothing like seeing him up there under the bright lights, trying to look interesting and intelligent. Usually, the strain is too much.

PIRATES UPSET OTTAWA TEAM (International News Service) PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—There was much rejoicing today in the camp of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Reinforced by the acquisition of Fraser and Spring, the Pirates went out last night and won themselves a hockey game, defeating Ottawa, 3 to 1.

Jarvis, White and Mills tallied for the winners while Gagne hit the net for the Senators.

Four Games In Church League Four fast games are on tap tonight in the New Castle Church League. The first game starts at 8 o'clock.

St. Johns Lutheran team will tangle with the league leading First Baptist team in the first game, the other games in their order are: First M. E. and Wesley M. E.; Temple Israel and Central Presbyterian; Croton M. E. and Mahoning M. E.

Saturday night two games are to be played as follows: Third U. P. and Central Christians, and the St. Johns Lutherans and Highland U. P. teams. The City League tilt for Saturday will find the Pennsy R. R. team and Toddy Five tangle. This game will follow the Church League games which start at 7:30 o'clock.

Rosenbloom-Lomski Battle Tonight In New York Garden

Maxie Rosenbloom Will Attempt To Comeback Tonight In New York Fight

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Maxie Rosenbloom, tossed out of the quartet of light heavyweight challengers recognized by the state athletic association when he dropped a decision to Jimmy Slattery, will endeavor to apologize for that "faux pas" at Madison Square Garden tonight when he clashes with Leo Lomski for ten rounds.

The Harlem clown regained quite a bit of prestige by outslugging Yale Okun here recently and is of the opinion that a thorough drubbing of the one-time "Aberdeen assassin" tonight will place him back in the picture.

Rosenbloom and Lomski are not strangers; in fact, they might be classified as old friends, having met in the ring before on three occasions. Each holds a decision, one bout going in the books as a draw.

George Courtney, Oklahoma cowboy, who was once on the commission's list of four challengers, meets Joe Banovic of Birmingham, N. Y., in the ten-round semi-final.

Canada Lee, New York welterweight, takes on Arturo Scheckles, Belgium pride, in the first ten-rounder.

Primo Canera, Gargantuan gonder, has been asked to occupy a ring-side seat or seats at the night festivities.

Franklin Plays Tie At Farrell Thursday Local Junior High Quintet Ties With Farrell Reserves, 15-15

Ben Franklin Junior High school basketball team traveled to Farrell on Thursday and played a game with that city's high school reserve team. The game ended 15-15 after two extra periods had been played.

The game was interesting and hard fought throughout. For Ben Franklin the playing of Komitne and Teplica featured while Timparo and Magotto were the best for the Farrell aggregation.

Following is the summary of the game: Farrell Reserves 15 Ben Franklin 15

Magnotto F. Teplica Timparo F. Regan Sorullo C. Jones Fahr G. Komitne Lichak G. Komitne Substitutions: Farrell, Vance, Williams, Chiccarino, Danessa; Ben Franklin: DeCarbo and Molsko. Field Goals: Magnotto, Timparo 3, Teplica 2, Regan, Komitne 3, Foul Goals Ben Franklin 3 out of 11; Farrell 7 out of 15. Referee: Smith.

Washington High Defeats Laurels The George Washington Junior High basketball team made it eight straight victories for the season, on Thursday night, at the Washington High gym when they walloped the Laurels 57 to 16. At the end of the first half the Gillespie coached machine was leading 33 to 0.

On Tuesday January 7, the Washington High varsity gets its first real test of the year when they tackle the strong Shenango High team at the Washington Junior High gym. The game is billed for 4 o'clock. Coach Gillespie is confident that his great little team will come through with a victory over the Shenango boys.

SPORTS REVIEW 1929 --- December By NORMAN E. BROWN

By NORMAN E. BROWN Central Press Sport Writer NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—December proved to be the "clean-up" month for sports. Golf, boxing, billiards, winter baseball and football all took a final fling in the sport news.

DEC. 7—Florida University defeated Oregon 20 to 6 in one of the last of the intercollegiate battles at Miami, Fla.

DEC. 7—Leo Diegel retained his title as United States golf champion by winning the P. G. A. tourney at Los Angeles, 6-4, eliminating Johnny Farrell in the semi-finals. Diegel had defeated Walter Hagen before meeting Farrell. It was Diegel's second consecutive victory over Hagen in the event. Hagen was shooting for his sixth title as pro king.

DEC. 11—Baseball broke into the news for a day when the magnates in winter session pulled off a few trades. That of Grover Alexander and Catoer McCurdy of the Cardinals to the Philadelphia Nationals for Pitcher Bob McGraw and Outfielder Peel and one sending Sammy Hale of the world's champion Athletics to the St. Louis Browns in exchange for the veteran catcher, Wally Schang, were the outstanding ones.

DEC. 14—Southern California eleven trounced Carnegie Tech 45 to 13 in their intercollegiate battle at Los Angeles after the easterners had held them to a 13 to 13 tie through the first half.

DEC. 19—Ralph Greenleaf won the world's pocket billiard championship in the annual tourney at Detroit after a thrilling tourney in which the world's record for single runs had been broken twice. Erwin Rudolph, early in the tourney, staged a run of 111 for a new world's record and set a second world mark when he won his 125 ball match in four innings. Two days later Greenleaf set a new record by running off 126 in eliminating Frank Tuberski, defending champion. This run finished him on him the match in two innings, breaking Rudolph's other record. The following day Greenleaf ran his string to 153 before missing. The tourney ended in a tie, Greenleaf winning the playoff.

DEC. 20—Benny Bass of Philadelphia knocked out Tod Morgan, junior lightweight champ, in the second round of their fight for the title in New York and a probe of the battle was started by the New York state athletic commission. Morgan had successfully defended his title earlier in the year against Santiago Zorilla (not Gorilla Jones, as erroneously mentioned earlier).

DEC. 20—Bill Carrigan famous old Red Sox catcher and leader resigned as manager of the Boston American league club after trying vainly

Boosters Drop Game At Butler

New Castle Boosters Nosed Out 33 To 30 In Fast Game With Butler Armos

KULICH-LeFEVRE HIGH SCORERS

The New Castle Boosters met defeat 33 to 30 in a fast and thrilling battle at Butler Armory floor on Thursday night, when the strong Butler Armo team unloosed a last half attack that netted them a victory.

In the first quarter the Boosters had a nine point lead, but at half time the score was 20 to 16, with the Boosters ahead. It was one of the best games played this year on the Butler armory court.

The Armo team got the breaks in the final seven minutes of play when Lindy Bruce and Francis Uile, two of the Booster stars were ejected from the game due to the personal foul ruling. Rose the big Armo center caged three baskets after Bruce left the game and Wolfgang sunk the basket that gave the Butlers the victory. The Armos are rated the strongest semi-pro team in this district.

The Butler team was picked to defeat the Boosters by a big score, and the fans were considerably surprised when the game ended with but a three-point margin. Kulich and Franklin, together with Captain Sid Lockley gave the Boosters their lead in the first half of the game, by sinking three buckets. LeFevre and Rose led the Butler team on the offensive with eight buckets between them.

The summary: Armo Five 33, Boosters 30. Kulich F. Wolfgang Franklin F. Douthett Bruce C. Rose S. Lockley G. LeFevre Uile G. Brown Subs—McClelland, E. Lockley, Flemming, Field goals—Kulich 4, Franklin 3, Bruce 2, S. Lockley 3, Douthett 2, Wolfgang 2, Rose 3, LeFevre 3, Fouls—Boosters 6 out of 11, Armos 9 out of 15. Referee—Bohler, Butler "Y". Enemies Seek To Ruin Art Shires

Gamblers Arrange With Detroit Fighter To "Lay Down" To Great Art Shires

(International News Service) CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Professional enemies made jealous by the stupendous success of C. Arthur (the Great) Shires, White Sox first baseman with pugilistic aspirations, were blamed today by his manager for the charges made in Detroit that "Whitman" tried to "fix" an opponent.

Nessie Blumenthal, Shires' business representative, said the alleged request made of battling Criss, Shires' opponent in Detroit, to have Criss take a dive to the canvas early in the bout, was made by gamblers or enemies who were not authorized to make the request.

When told of Shires' predicament, Keneasaw M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball, said he would not act on the status of Shires until the Michigan boxing commission decides what is to be done.

Crimson Passers Ready For Battle With Westminster

Coach Bob Thorn Confident That Grove City Will Upset Titans Tonight

VERY GOOD GAME IS LOOKED FOR

GROVE CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—Facing the most important test of the year in its first home basketball game, the Crimson squad awaits the whistle which will send them into action against the Westminster Trojans in the college gym tonight. Coach Thorn has worked his passers to the limit this week to prepare for early season classic.

Whether the Grove City quintet can stop Coach Lawther's veteran club is the big question here today. Coach Thorn has been pointing his team for the express purpose of defeating Grove City's traditional rival, but the task looms big on the eve of the struggle. The Crimson cagers are showing plenty of improvement in the six weeks since active practice was started, but as yet the smooth team play necessary to defeat a veteran aggregation of the calibre of Westminster is lacking.

Spurred by memories of a double defeat last year, Thorn's squad is ready to give Westminster a battle every inch of the way. Confidence was injected into the squad by their fine showing against Pitt, but Bob Thorn has convinced them that Westminster will be just as hard to beat. Grove City fans are looking for the greatest court game here for many years.

The entire Crimson squad reported Monday. Coach Thorn held long drills each day, ending with a shorter program last night. With another month in which to prepare, the Crimson mentor believes he would have a team clever enough to battle the United Presbyterians to a finish, but he is not optimistic as his team takes the floor tonight.

Cavanaugh Signs Fordham Contract

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—Fordham University was looking at the 1930 football season through rose-colored glasses today following the re-engagement of Major Frank A. Cavanaugh as head coach.

The Maroon coach, who guided the Rams undefeated through a tough schedule last year, placed his name on a one-year contract.

Youthful Bandit Ransacks Home; Is Being Hunted

Police Sergeants Home In Pittsburgh Visited By Thug, Wife Is Beaten Up

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—Police today are searching for the youthful bandit who early today forced his way into the home of Police Sergeant George Stone, beat Mrs. Stone, ransacked the house and escaped. Mrs. Stone said that a man had telephoned earlier and asked for Stone. He was on duty, she informed the caller, and would not be home until this morning. Police believe the unknown caller is the bandit.

Bride And Groom Taken In Custody On Robbery Charge

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—A bride and groom of two days are being held here today in connection with the theft in Boston, Mass., of $700 five years ago.

Earl Stark, 24, the groom, is said by detectives to have stolen the money while working as a mail clerk under the name of Earl Wallace on the U. S. S. Utah, and, according to the officers, has confessed.

The bride before her marriage to Stark on New Year's eve in Wellsburg, W. Va., was Miss Ethel Root, a waitress in an East Liberty restaurant here. She met Stark two months ago when he became a counter man in the restaurant, she told detectives. Confirmation is being sought by local authorities who are in communication with Boston postal authorities.

Annual Meeting Will Be Held In Chapter Rooms On Monday Evening

Annual election of officers will be held by Lawrence County chapter, American Red Cross at their meeting to be held Monday evening, January 6th in the chapter rooms in the Temple Building.

The report of the annual Roll Call will be submitted at this time along with other important business, and a full attendance of the board of directors is desired by President W. Walter Braham.

Pittsburgh Woman Killed By Taxicab

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Jan. 3.—Traffic accidents in the past 24 hours here took the life of one woman and injured nine persons.

Mrs. Rose Sepede, 46, died today in a hospital where she was taken after she was struck by a taxicab. The accident occurred near her home on the north side. Edward Lavelle, driver of the car, was arrested pending the coroner's inquest.

Now he has a companion. It is a chicken which he brought to the house in his mouth a few days ago. The chicken refuses to desert the dog and eats and sleeps with him.

COOK COUNTY TO SPEND MILLIONS ON FORESTRY

(International News Service)
CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—A program calling for $16,000,000 to make the forest preserves of Chicago and Cook county a model of primitive beauty and modern comfort and convenience, has been announced by the forest preserve commissioners.

More than $11,000,000 will be spent on the forestway for pavements, grade separations at highways and railway separations, according to estimates of the advisory committee.

A building program providing for forest lodges, golf houses, field houses, swimming pools, boating facilities, comfort stations and concessionaire booths, calls for $2,500,000. An additional $500,000 for reforestation of 5,000 acres is asked.

Twins of the Ice Festival

These accomplished twin sisters, Lillian (left) and Ruth Cork, were two of the shining lights of the Middle Atlantic Outdoor Amateur Speed Skating Championships held at Newburgh, N. Y., on New Year's Day under the auspices of the Newburgh Skating Association. Lillian and Ruth took first and second places respectively in the 440-yard intermediate championship.

NEW YORK STOCKS

Stock Market Makes Feeble Rally Effort

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The stock market made feeble effort to rally in the early trading today, but speculators were not in a buying mood and after recording fractionally higher prices, most of the active industrial stocks took another tumble down the price scale.

The Fox Film corporation situation showed no new developments, but the stock was pushed down to a new low at 16 1/8 by a flood of new selling orders which met scant support on the floor of the stock exchange. Radio was also under selling pressure on price-cutting announcements and rumors and sold off 2 points at 42.

After rallying about a point to 16 1/8, U. S. Steel sold under 167. The bears in American and Foreign Power were given some rough treatment as that was pushed up to 95 1/2. But with this as with other stocks the outside demand was small. The mail-order stocks were reactionary, with Sears Roebuck back to 83 1/2 and Montgomery Ward down 2 at 46 1/2. Only 258,000 shares changed hands in the first half hour.

Baldwin Locomotive and United Aircraft, yesterday's best performers, reached slightly higher prices in active trading today, and automobile stocks made an effort to radiate the usual pre-motor show enthusiasm.

He is shown at the left, on the platform with the mayor introducing him. At the left of the platform are Miss Elizabeth Morrow and Mrs. Dwight Morrow. The Morrrows' illustrious son-in-law, Colonel Charles Lindbergh, and his wife were unable to be on hand, being on a transcontinental flight.

Canadian Fliers Take Up Search For Two Airmen

Weather Conditions Have Held Up Hunt For Captain Ben Eielson And Mechanic THREE

(International News Service)
FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Jan. 3.—The two remaining cabin planes piloted by Canadian fliers who are to search for Lieut. Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, Arctic fliers, were to take off for Nome today.

Attempting to take off yesterday with Pat Reid and his plane, Gifford Swartman "cracked up" one of the relief ship. If the weather permits, Reid's plane and another piloted by Matthew Niemenen will take off today to join the search in the vicinity of Teller, Alaska.

Extremely low temperatures have hindered the search during the past few days.

Soviets Add New Plane

MOSCOW, Jan. 3.—Determined to make every possible effort to find the missing American airmen, Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, the Soviet Arctic commission today authorized another Soviet plane to take part in the search.

This plane, a tri-motored Fokker monoplane, is now at Khabarovsk. It will leave immediately for Okhotsk and fly northward from there to northeastern Siberia where the missing aviators are believed to have come down about seven weeks ago.

The main Soviet rescue expedition, commanded by Boris Chukhovsky, is now enroute from Moscow to the Arctic region which will be scoured for the missing men.

Inmate Of Home Fatally Stricken

(International News Service)
GROVE CITY, Pa., Jan. 3.—Heart trouble was today blamed for the death of David Burton, 76-year-old Erie inmate of the Wayside Inn for aged Odd Fellows here, according to a statement of Coroner William McGrath.

Burton entered the home from Erie on Nov. 16, 1927.

Lawrence County Judges Who Sat On Butler Bench

In giving a history of the judiciary in Butler county, Judge-elect, James O. Campbell in honor of retiring Judge James M. Galbreath, referred to former judges, who held court here and at Butler, as follows:

Judge Agnew was succeeded by Judge McGuffin of Lawrence county, and he in turn by Judges McJunkin and James Bredin (a son of Judge John Bredin, the district having been awarded an additional law judge which position was filled by appointment of Charles McCandless until the succeeding election.

Judges McJunkin and Bredin were succeeded by Hazen and McMichael, each of Lawrence county. Judge Hazen was the first man whom I remember as being on the bench.

Upon the death of Judge McMichael he was succeeded by Judge Michael, considerate prince of men, John M. Greer, and the district then was divided, each of Butler and Lawrence forming a separate judicial district and Judge Greer became president judge of Butler county.

Festival Lights Being Removed

It won't be long now until the last of the Christmas lighting on the main street will be down. Workmen have removed almost all the string of lights from the south side of Washington street and were engaged in taking the lights down from the north side this morning.

YOUNG MEN HAVE ELECTRIC GLOBES

Two young men were apprehended late last night by the police authorities with thirteen electric globes in their possession. They finally admitted that they had stolen them from the Penn Theatre.

They were brought before Mayor William H. Gillespie this morning, admitting that they had stolen the globes, and were college students.

They were finally discharged by the mayor, who suggested that they refrain from coming here in the future to pull off their college pranks.

WIERTON BOY IS SOUGHT IN CITY

J. W. Hickman of the Wierton, W. Va., police department last night asked the authorities here to assist in locating Joe DeFranco, aged 14, who ran away from his home in that city December 31, 1929 and is believed to be in this city. He was wearing a black sweater with a red band and dark trousers when he left home and did not have any hat or cap.

Stock Market Is Dull Today

Less Than 900,000 Shares Change Hands In Dull And Listless Morning

RALLY IS BLOCKED BY SELLING ORGY

By W. S. COUSINS

(International News Service Financial Editor)
NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The rally in the stock market was held back today by persistent selling of the industrial and utilities whenever they appeared to be gathering strength for a march up the price scale. Less than 900,000 shares of stock had changed hands up to the noon period. Which was the best evidence of the dullness and lack of demand for stocks from any quarters outside of the professionals. Some investment buying of the dividend payers with the best records was reported. But not enough to make much of a mark on the speculative record.

Though business and industrial leaders are hopeful of the coming year, they recognize that a period of recuperation is necessary, and it is anybody's guess how long that period will be. Until coming events cast their shadows more plainly, the stock market will drift and shuffle.

Film Stocks Banded

In the absence of definite news on the Fox Film situation that stock was banded back and forth among the professionals on the floor.

After being driven down to 16 1/8, Fox Film rallied to 20 1/2, but was unable to hold the ground won on the rally.

The mail-order stocks were again under selling pressure, in the face of the glowing reports of December and second-half-1929 business. Sears Roebuck falling 2 1/2 to 82 1/2 and Montgomery Ward under 46.

Sure stocks like Macy, Woodward and associated Dry Goods lost ground in the process of shifting around among traders on the big board.

The $96,000,000 increase in brokers' loans was unfavorable or favorable as a market factor according as it denoted the return of the outside speculator to the market, or the shifting of stocks from "strong to weak hands."

Easier Money Signs

First signs of easier money conditions appeared with the lowering of the call loan rate to 5 per cent in the third hour. Bankers look for the continuance of easy money in the first

YOUNG MAN HELD FOR INVESTIGATION

Vincent DeLillo, arrested about 11 o'clock last night by Detective John Young and Officer M. J. Young, following serious charges made against him by a young lady of the south side, is being held by the police pending a thorough investigation of the charges made against him. It is alleged, the police say, that DeLillo attacked the young woman after she got off the car enroute home from work and not a great distance from her home.

Chicago Is Not Wickedest City; Paris Is Worse

Says Real Criminals Are Ones Who Plan Subtle Crime

BELIEVES CRIME IN CHICAGO DECREASING

By FRANCIS F. HEALY
International News Service Staff Correspondent
CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Chicago is not the crime center of the world. Paris is.
Chicago doesn't know the meaning of crime. Murder is only a minor manifestation of crime and gang murders are the result of organized warfare. Paris is the real haven of the so-called master criminal. It is there that master crimes are planned. Paris only has involved jewel robberies, swindles, bank robberies and the "subtle" crimes.
Edgar Wallace, famous English novelist, visitor here, expressed these beliefs and Mr. Wallace certainly should command attention because he can bang out a mystery novel that would make you look under the bed before retiring quicker than you can say Jacques Papadioragoutoupoulouskiwotz.
Novel in 16 Hours.
His novel, "Strange Countess", was written in 16 hours, won a prize and 1,000,000 copies sold.
Wallace couldn't even remember the name of his famous book but Mrs. Wallace, accompanying him, supplied the title. Wallace gives the thrilling public about four mystery stories a year, which accounts for some of the insomnia in England.
"Crime in Chicago is on the decrease, I believe," said Wallace. "Much of this is due to the criminals themselves who have gone too far. The St. Valentine's day massacre, for instance, is no mystery. Everyone knows who did it. But strangely enough no one asks why the murderers have not been brought to justice."
Refuses Opinion.
Wallace refused to state outright who he believed committed the massacre of seven members of "Bugs" Moran's gang.
Discussing the elements of a good mystery story, Wallace said the greatest element was suspense.
Wallace said he thought the most intricate crimes were committed in Paris. In this country and Chicago, he said, crime was accomplished on a more wholesale scale. For example, here, six bandits will raid a bank and obtain a vast amount of loot. In Paris, one "master criminal" will plot the robbery and by some almost miraculous manner will gain entrance during the night and single-handed escape with the loot.

Council Approves Coal Dealer Bill

Wholesaler Must Secure License And Furnish Copy Of Weight Slip To Sealer

Council today adopted an ordinance which provides how coke and coal is to be sold and delivered.
The wholesaler must make out a triplicate copy showing the weight of the fuel.
He retains one copy, another goes to the retailer and the consumer gets a copy.
The retailer must take out a license.
The move was taken at the suggestion of Sealer and Inspector of Weights W. A. Brown, who will now be in a position to check up should there be any charges or suspicion of short weight.

WOMEN DISCUSS PEACE PROGRESS

The fifth conference of the Cause and Cure of War, held annually by ten women's national organizations, will meet in Washington, D. C., January 14 to 17. The gaps in the machinery of peace and the growth of peace machinery within the last year will be among the topics discussed. The world court and arbitration treaties will be others. The officers of the national committee are: Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, New York, chairman; vice chairmen, Miss Ruth Morgan, Mrs. Edgerton Parsons and Miss Henrietta Roelofs, of New York; secretaries, Mrs. Ben Hooper, Oakkosh, Wis., and Miss Josephine Schain, New York.

ROAMING

With Richards

Some News, Some Views, But Mostly Just Observations Of Interesting Things Around New Castle

There is always somebody ready to tear down the work of the builder. And always somebody ready to commit acts of vandalism when people take the time to put out decorations in front of their homes. The folks up on the north hill have learned this in the past few nights and the roars of the indignant citizens can be heard for blocks. And justly so.

Boys have been going around the hill stealing light bulbs out of the Christmas decorations which were put up. Many trees have been robbed of the bulbs, and the labor and expense of the citizens who went to some trouble to mark the season has been spoiled to some extent.

It seems to me that such tactics should be dealt with rather summarily. Calling such culprits in before the mayor would result in a lecture probably, for after all the theft was a minor one. And a lecture from the mayor only serves to glorify the escapade in the minds of some of these junior Jesse James. A trip back to the woodshed, with a strong right arm and a shaving strop would help considerably. If some of these lads had to eat their meals from the mantelpiece for a couple of days, they might feel that their thieving had little glory connected with it.

For pleasant driving last night would be considerably down the list. Had to drive to Ellwood City through that driving rain and fog and it was anything but unalloyed pleasure.

One portion of that trip deserves the united commendation of motorists and that portion is the detour around the Cascade park bridge. The detour always was an abomination and a snare, but at the present time its condition is far worse than it ever was. From the time you leave the concrete until you get back on it is a series of bumps.

From one end to the other it is a series of large holes and a speed of more than five miles per hour promises broken springs. Why a detour as much used as this is should be left in such horrible shape is a mystery. After dawdling along for a year trying to build a bit of a bridge out there, it seems like adding Ossa to Pelion to ask motorists to travel such a detour.

The odd license numbers continue to appear. Saw one yesterday that was number C-6-V. H. Martin Lee, the county detective appointee, has HL-1. Some of the subscribers on rural telephone lines will probably get their phone numbers in license plates. For instance, 28-R-32 is a rural phone ring, and also a license number.

The Christmas holiday for the school children is about gone. Monday sees them start back for a long stretch of continued study, with few holidays looming up between now and the time for the summer vacation.

In a letter from Kenneth F. Clancy of Buffalo, formerly of New Castle, he incloses a clipping from a Buffalo paper commenting upon an article in the News some time ago concerning a doe that was killed by a motorist on the New Wilmington Road. Now I wonder what Clancy means when he says in the letter "Ed Scanlon who writes 'Around the Town' for the Buffalo Evening News, doesn't know the kind of DEARS that operate automobiles on the New Wilmington Road or he surely would never have stuck the above item on his column."

Filmed Lecture To Be Presented At Church Service

Rev. Virgil C. Finnerl, of Indianapolis, Ind., will speak Sunday evening in the Central Presbyterian church, located on the square, on "Why Girls Smoke".
The lecture will be presented with 80 colorful slides and a sane, scientific and constructive study of cigarette smoking and race degeneracy will be given.
Rev. Finnerl will make short addresses in the various churches of the city at different times Sunday and during the coming week will speak in the schools. His subject presents a theme of immediate interest to our modern society.

Union Baptists Will Hold Forum

The religious forum, which was postponed from last Sunday, will be held Sunday at 3 p. m. in the Union Baptist church.
The subjects to be discussed are: "How Does the Church of Today Compare with the Early Church?" "Is Man as the Head of Creation, Losing Out to Woman?" "Can One Be Prejudiced and Still be a Christian?" and "Does Our Conception of God Need Revision?"
Special musical numbers will be given during the afternoon.
Robert—"Mother I had such an awful dream last night. Does it mean anything?"
Mother—"Yes. It means that I know now what became of that chocolate cake I couldn't find last night."

Students Save Two Thousand Dollars During December

Highland School Pupils Average 39 Cents Each During Short School Month

Although December was a short school month, the boys and girls in the New Castle schools saved almost two thousand dollars in the thrift system, and the Highland Avenue school had the highest average savings per pupil for the month, with 39c. The West Side school was second with an average of 30c and the Arthur McGill school was third with an average of 26c.
The Lawrence school did remarkably well with an average of 24c, as it is the smallest school in the city. Thaddeus Stevens school saved 23c per pupil, and both the George Washington Junior high school and the Benjamin Franklin Junior high school had excellent averages for the month, when their large enrollment is considered, these averages being respectively 21c and 17c.
The Rose Avenue school had an average of 17c, the Pollock Avenue school an average of 15c, the North Street school an average of 15c, the Lincoln and Garfield school an average of 14c, the Mahoning school an average of 14c, the Croton Avenue school an average of 12c and the Terrace Avenue school an average of 6c.
In the county schools, the Shenandoah Township school saved $88.81, the Union Township school at Scotland Lane saved $74.90, the Neshannock Public school $27.45, the North Beaver Township school $25.45 and the East Brook school $14.43.
In addition, the children put in the thrift machines installed in the lobby of the bank $51.28.
The following are the amounts deposited in the automatic receiving tellers for the month of December: Benjamin Franklin Jr. High School,

County Sabbath School Executives Plan Conference

Mid-Year Efficiency Meeting Will Be Held At The Y. W. C. A. On January 23

The monthly meeting of the executive committee of the Lawrence County Sabbath School Association was held at the parlors of the Y. W. C. A. Thursday evening, with the president Robt. M. Strickler, Jr., presiding, and the following officers present: Mrs. Wm. J. Marshall, county department superintendent; Howard Cox, young people's division superintendent; Rev. J. Ralph Neale, pastor of the New Wilmington United Presbyterian church and Rev. D. C. Schenely, pastor of the Mahoning Presbyterian church, members of the executive committee.

After an opening prayer by Rev. Neale, the chief matter under discussion was the mid-year efficiency conference to be held in the parlors of the Y. W. C. A. Thursday afternoon and evening, January 23rd. The members of the Pennsylvania State Sabbath School Association staff to be on the program will be Rev. L. Louis Aber, state administrative superintendent and H. C. Girdland, adult division superintendent.
It was voted to offer a shield to the district having the best representation of county and district officers at the conference. This shield to be presented at the Christian fellowship dinner.

A general discussion followed as to the program and its participants.

after which the meeting adjourned with a prayer by Rev. Schenely.

"I say Jones! I want to insure my coal yards against fire. What would a policy for $20,000 cost?"

"What coal is it? Same kind as you sent me last?"
"Yes."
"I wouldn't bother insuring it. If I were you—it won't burn."
